First Day Causes Excitement

By Julie Dickinson

"Look at all of the freshman!" exclaimed Senior Cindy Hilbig. September 8, the first day of the year, proved to be an eyeopening experience for many of the PHS students.

Nervous freshman gathered around tables anxiously awaiting their schedule. Freshman Zoe Anastas stated, "I was super nervous that everything on my first day would go wrong." On the other hand, the Seniors remained very laid back, and weren't in such a hurry for the day to start. "I'm a Senior now; I'm past the stage of being nervous," commented one Senior on the first morning of school. The attitudes varied among the PHS students.

Upon arriving at school, the students were quite shocked at the different changes around the campus. There were fences and sidewalks where they had never been before.

The addition of 735 freshmen remained the topic of many students. "I can't believe that there are so many freshman around; the classes get bigger by the year!" stated Senior Paul Mortoloni.

Besides the crowded halls and the heat, the first day of school ran smoothly. One optimistic student remarked, "I guess that I am looking forward to the year ahead of me, but I'm already looking forward to next summer vacation!"

On the first morning of school, the student body received a warm welcome back.

Student Offers Warning

By Julie Dickinson

"I try to make school fun, and not have it always be a big problem!" commented one successful PHS student. Every student whether it be a senior or a freshman, acquired their own system to succeed and make it through school. Participating in sports, clubs or other extra-curricular activities seemed to be the most common way of maintaining good feelings about their classes.

Besides turning to activities to help make the school year more fun and worthwhile, almost all students agreed that having teachers and classes they liked made for a more successful year. One anonymous student mentioned, "I feel like I did better in school last year, due to the fact that I really liked all of my teachers."

Senior Kim Smith said, "I could really kick myself because I've waited until my last year in school to really work hard and do my best."

New teachers and new classes added a variation to the academic scene on campus. The seniors had their choice of two economics classes, Modern or Applied. I think that it was really nice of the administration to let us choose our economics classes since they require us to take it now," said Mike Anderson.

Athletes Maintain Success

By Julie Dickinson

Athletics remained a very important part of the PHS students' lives over the 1986-87 school year. They provided school spirit for the spectators, and competition for the athletes. The pride that the athletes felt when they won a game was incredible. "There isn't a better feeling than winning an important game, and having the student body feel proud of you," commented one anonymous football player. But winning wasn't everything for the athletic teams although it was important.

"I feel like I can escape the immense pressure of my schoolwork, and the strict 7:30 to 2:16 daily schedule by participating in a sport," commented Mike Alhstrom. For some of the students, their academic schedule simply got too difficult. Sports, simply provided a nice and different change of pace.

The football, soccer and track teams were all able to finally play their games on a nice field with a real stadium. Varsity soccer player Chris Eakman stated, "It was nice to be able to look around the field before a game, and think to yourself how nice our stadium turned out."

Despite certain losses here and there, the PHS athletic teams, maintained Poway's good reputation around San Diego. "It's really neat to be in Los Angeles or a place far away and have a person say 'Hey Poway ... isn't that the place with the great sports team?' and being able to say yes!!" explained Tamara Watkins.

Overall, the sports teams gave their school a reason to be proud to attend Poway High. And they had a great time doing it too!

Major Changes on Campus

By Julie Dickinson

The changes around the PHS campus over the 1986-87 school year amazed the entire student body. Sidewalks, fences and gates were among a few of the new additions around all parts of the school.

The fencing around the entire school remained the conversation piece for many of the students. Joe Johnson stated, "The school feels more like a jail every day!" Thick, black gates were locked every night for security purposes. "I understand the need to protect from possible vandalism," commented one student.

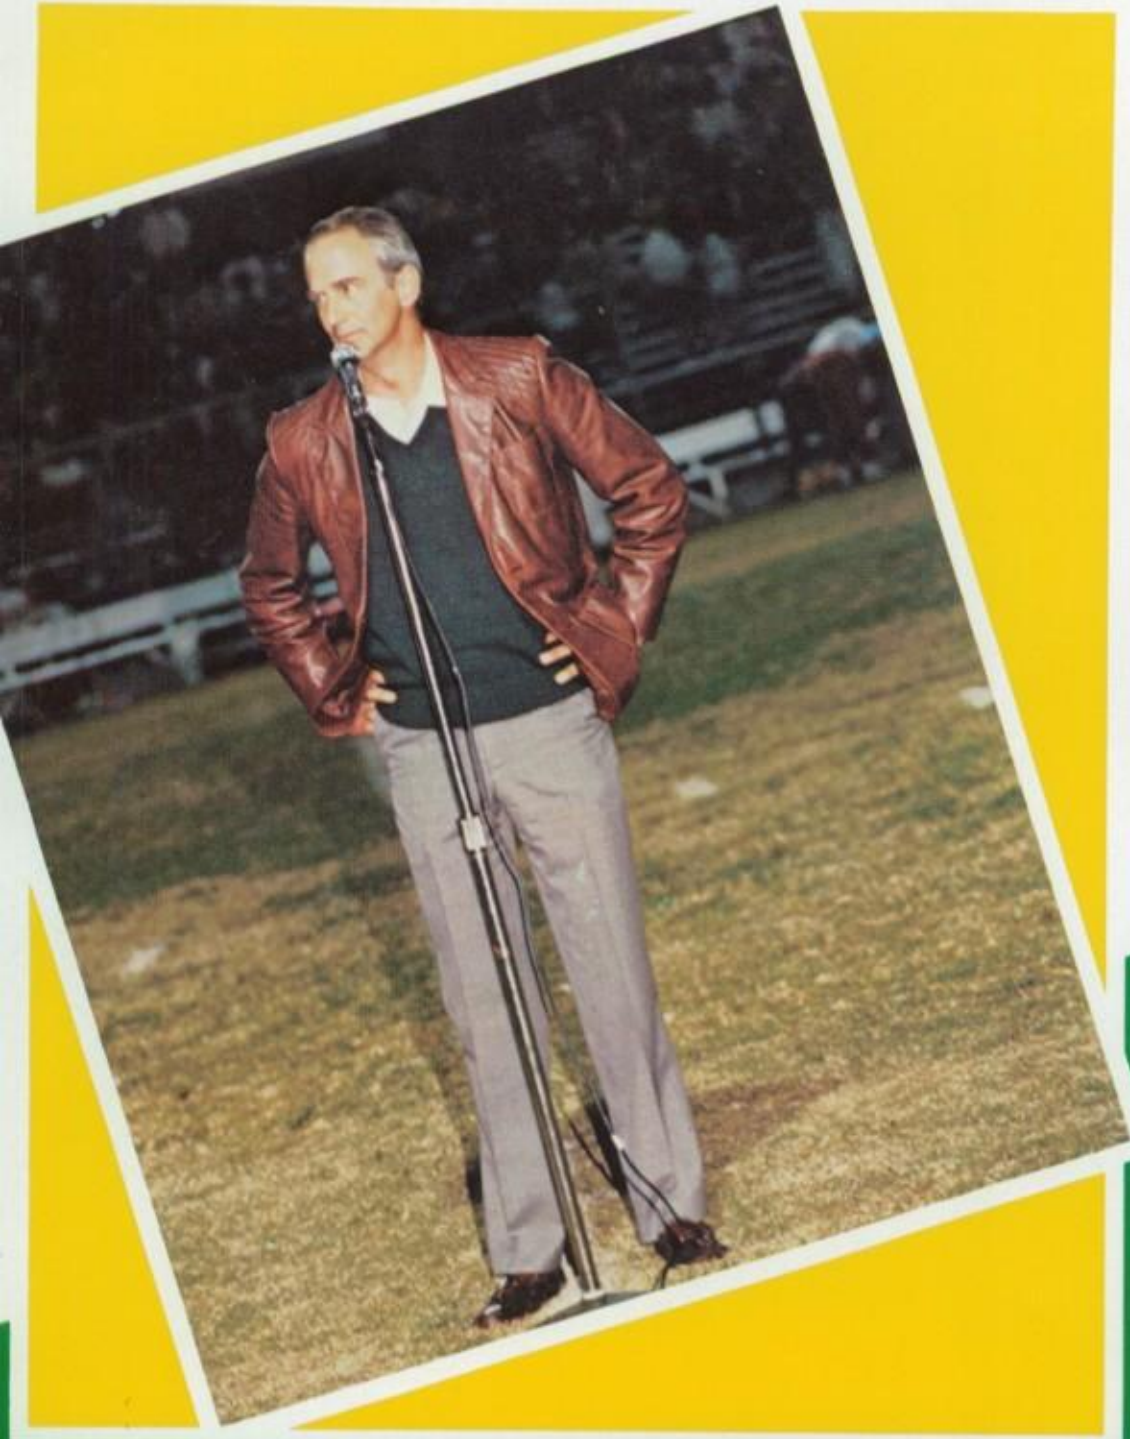

The addition of cement walkways received positive comments. Not only did they look nice, but they prevented the students from sinking ankle deep in mud after a rainy day. "I hated tromping through the mud!" stated Sophomore Lisa Smith.

The library received a very impressive addition at the beginning of the year. They added an alarm system exit way. If a student walked out without checking out his book, a sound would go off. Librarian Mrs. Nobriga stated, "We're very proud of how far along our library system has come!" One intrigued student commented, "I think that the library is neat; it reminds me of an airport when you walk through the X-ray system."

When Jody Thill and Cindy Roszel come to the library, they do all of their work!

“We’ve gotta celebrate!”

By Julie Dickinson

“Goooo Powaaaay!!!!” Loud cheers and screams crept out of the corners of Poway High on September 12, 1986, and with very good reason. The school spirited Titans were once again, after waiting for eleven years, able to have a home game on their own campus. In the past, the Titans drove to Mount Carmel to play all home games. They even had to host their Homecoming game away. The new stadium required a lot of hard work and planning. The entire student, teacher and community population took part in helping to raise the necessary funds to build the stadium. “I bought a name plate for the bleachers,” stated Debi Quesenberry.

The atmosphere for the first “real” home game proved to be perfect; the night was clear, chilly and fun. Cheerleader Debi Devore commented, “There was an overwhelming amount of school spirit!” Everyone in the stands seemed to be comfortable and at ease.

The Varsity football team will always remember their first game in the Poway High Stadium for very special reasons. With a predicted loss of more than twenty points under Granite Hills, the number-two rated team in the county, the team swept the field with amazing skill and power. They beat Granite Hills 13-7. “I’m in total shock!” stated player Dave Meyers. Senior Pilar Melendez summed up the entire evening by stating, “It was a great game! What a way to start off the season and life of our stadium.”

Titans Escape from Schoolwork

By Julie Dickinson

"I gotta take a break!" exclaimed a worn out junior on a Friday morning. The fact was, that the PHS students could never say that they were shorted of activities to break up their academic schedule. School related activities were going on every day of the week for the students to participate in.

Pep-rallies, put on by the ASB improved greatly over the 1986-87 school year. They involved more students, and entertained almost everyone. The ASB attempted to perform a pep-rally every Friday with a large athletic schedule. This pep-rallies included everything from the class yell, a pie in the face contest, to a destructive "Devil Dozer." "The Mt. Carmel game assembly was by far the best pep-rally of the year!" stated Carolyn Salazar.

The ever so exciting MORP fashion show amazed the students once again, with the most stunning and original outfits that were modeled. "I particularly liked Kenny Battle's polyester jumpsuit; it was the most attractive of all," commented Angie McDonald. The extremely exciting MORP dance followed soon after the fashion show.

Homecoming, Winter Ball, Sadies and Prom all came and went successfully, and were enjoyed by all who attended. "The Seniors put on a great Sadies dance; it was so original and fun!" said one quiet freshman. "I didn't go to Prom, but I wish that I would have asked someone," added a certain junior.

For most of the seniors, their free time was spent doing the things that they really wanted to do. "It's my last year of high school, and I want to have a lot of fun before entering the real world," explained Phillip Bairley.

Overall, the PHS students utilized their free time, by having lots of fun. Doing things to break up their demanding schedule played an important key in academic success.

Dressed in her more formal attire, Tina Darby blew bubbles of happiness at the MORP fashion Show.

Student Life

Back in the Swing of Things

"Gee, whiz another pep-rally!" squealed an anxious freshman. With music-filled lunchtime, on some occasions and humorous assemblies, many Poway High students considered student life on campus fun and light-hearted. Though, there were "good activities, some students weren't as involved as they should've been," commented Adam Jones. However, the quality of an event didn't seem a problem as much as student participation. Pilar Melendez pointed out, "The only regret I have is that we don't have as many activities as I would like to see. Whenever we have pep-rallies or assemblies, our student body revs up ... only wish we could have them more often."

This year, Senior Titans took to the ice in a brutal game of ice hockey while others got ready to put on a smashing Sadie Hawkins.

Jennifer Stampfli remarked, "It's great to spend time with fellow students outside of school." Also, on various Friday nights, the ASB put on an After Game dance which provided entertainment for all. Elisa Smith agreed, "It was an overall success and served as an outlet from school pressures." Under the direction of the juniors, Morp turned out to be a different dance unlike the elegant evening of romance at Prom. Even the Morp Fashion Show proved to be a hilarious event. The real "nerd" was vividly portrayed by twelve courageous students. Then, Homecoming kicked off the year with excitement. The student body as a whole was involved in activities from assemblies to dances. Students initiated school spirit far more than previous years.

"Poway High has more to offer than any student could possibly take advantage off!" stated Senior Glen Tripp. Thus, when Student Life faded away for the summer and the class of '87 left its mark at PHS, the activities would continue to be a special memory for everyone.

Admit Two Nerds

By Jenny Selser

"Hey, you with the bandaid across your nose! What do you think of MORP?" asked a plaid and striped polyester friend. "Uhh . . . it's interesting," proclaimed Teri Miley. This feeling was evident during PHS's third annual MORP. Kim Uyeda stated, "I had lots of fun because at this dance we don't have to act like ourselves."

As a tradition MORP has consisted of "nerds," "geeks" and a trash-laden gym. Students were able to view Poway High at its utmost fashion unconscious stage. The dance was accompanied by groovy dance music and decorations. In place of streamers, toilet paper was strung. Carnations were replaced by stunning weeds. The wall decor consisted of signs reading; "Dorks 4-Ever" and "Admit All Nerds."

The festivities were ruined for some people due to conflicts concerning same-sex couples. The administration stopped those couples entering the dance, even though they had bought bids and were not warned before hand. Tami Marko stated, "I was under the impression that dances were put on by students for the students. It's sad to think that one man's opinion spoiled the experience for so many of us that were really looking forward to it."

EMERALD BRIGADE

Making Success Look Easy

By Tami Watkins

The loudspeaker crackles as the bands await the upcoming decision, "And now for the Sweepstakes award ... The Poway High School Emerald Brigade!" shouted the announcer. Drum majors Chris Blackburn and Hector Valenzuela walked side by side to receive the well-deserved trophy.

This year the Emerald Brigade won as many as twenty awards during the marching season alone. When asked what keeps the band going, Drum Major Chris Blackburn said, "We are all one big family and we all love music, and we are together for music." The Brigade was a champion band in music, parade as well as field show. Flag Captain Lori Raber commented, "I've learned a lot about responsibility and I know that people can depend on me because with a group as big as us, you need that support, or nothing works."

The Emerald Brigade was very talented group of students who were dedicated to becoming the best. "Our band is so good, and our uniforms are terrific and no other band can get a crowd stirred up for action like ours," said Lara Janes. The band had a great year filled with awards and triumphs, like attending the Fiesta Bowl, a brigadeer said, "Now, that was an accomplishment we'll never forget!"

Revitalizing A Tradition

By Tami Watkins

"Happy 25th, Poway High!" chanted the class of '88 as they scurried by the football fans in the bleachers on October 12. Poway Titans were finally home and were welcomed with open arms by students and the community alike. Since this year represented a new beginning, so did the pageantry of Homecoming. This year for the first time the floats paraded around the field before the commencement of the Varsity game. A Junior, Lance Seymour commented, "I didn't like seeing the Homecoming floats before the game because the whole part of being there was for the halftime festivities, which should've included the floats."

When Halftime finally arrived on the cool, autumn night, the overall excitement of announcing the Homecoming Queen and King erupted when a skydiver came floating down out of the starlit sky. Once landed, the skydiver announced the King and Queen and presented Queen Kristen Rangel with a dozen red roses.

However, the Homecoming Court wasn't the only event that occurred on that Friday night. Poway lost the game to San Dieguito 16-7, but there were winners that evening, for example, the Seniors won first place float and the Freshmen came in second. Frosh President said, "We all were ecstatic and all the hard work paid off." Poway's Silver Anniversary was a true Homecoming for everyone!

A Class Act

By Jenny Selser

"Who are the Pinstripes?" asked a curious sophomore. The Homecoming Dance was attended by PHS students and alumni as well. The decorations coincided with the theme of "Homecoming Silver Anniversary." Green and silver balloons, streamers and paper decorations were cast throughout the gym, making it look better than ever. Over the stage a giant balloon arch was strung. This final touch pulled all of the decorations together.

The Homecoming dance was a semi-formal occasion put on by the ASB. Debi Devore stated, "Even though we lost the game the night before, I was really excited about the dance." "The ASB did a good job on the dance," stated Kim Vito. "The music wasn't the kind that I like to dance to, but overall I had a great time!" The choice of music for dances often brings conflicts. Bridget Gast remarked, "I like a band better than D.J.'s. Even if a band doesn't always play what everyone likes, I think they add a lot of fun to the dances." For those who attended the dance, the excitement of dressing up and dancing among friends made it fun.

The Court Sparkles

By Tami Watkins

"I was so surprised!" exclaimed Shelly Monahan when hearing she was a Senior Homecoming Princess for a third year in a row. She, like others in the Court, was in total awe with the honor. As Kenny Battle said, "I was stoaked; it was a complete honor for me to be nominated and to even be recognized by my peers."

The Homecoming Court has long been a tradition of ceremony and recognition and for Queen Kristen Rangel it proved to be a total shock. "I was really jazzed. I never thought I could have won Homecoming Queen, and having Dave win King was wonderful, too!" recalled Kristen. For all fourteen members of the Court, it was a real privilege to be selected by their classmates. Freshmen Princess Jodi Rosano replied, "I'll never forget this occasion and it was neat to know my class nominated me."

King Dave Meyers mostly expressed his gratitude to his parents for the honor. He said, "I'd like to thank my parents for giving me life so I could be King." This year's Homecoming Court was a very special one for they were the first "Home" Court since 1978. With all the festivities on October 12, the crowning of the King and Queen was an exciting moment for everyone. Tina Darby concluded, "Everyone was so overwhelmed, I couldn't help but be happy."

True Personalities Shine Through

By Jenny Selser

Witches, goblins, and cats are typical Halloween characters but not here at Poway High! Instead, crayons, devils, flappers, and pirates roamed the halls. Occasionally, Ronald Reagan or The Masters of the Universe could be seen protecting our sacred campus. This year's spirit towards Halloween was better than in the past due in part to the well-publicized costume contest as well as certain clubs emphasizing the fun of dressing up. There was a lunchtime pep rally during which the cheerleaders began an upbeat dance routine, wearing silver garbage bags. Then the ASB invited anyone who had the nerve, to come on stage, the chance to "strut their stuff", and in front of the entire on-looking student body. Prizes consisting of record gift certificates were awarded to the winners: Jared Hamilton (mental institution escapee) for most original, Glenn Capitano (crater-faced swamp thing) for scariest, and Norman Weiss (lizard man) took best all around. For those who participated, Halloween '86 was one to be remembered. "It was great! Students showed that nobody is ever too old for Halloween!" exclaimed Danielle Davidian.

LUNCHTIME

Starving for Time

By Tami Watkins

"I'm starved! My stomach is growling. When is this class over?" Many times hungry Titans cannot wait for the bell to ring to mark the beginning of lunch. For many it is the end of the day also.

"Lunch has become so crowded, you can't walk the halls without spilling your soft drink down the front of you," replied an annoyed student. On the other hand, if you can wait ten minutes for lunch you may be able to catch your breath and sit down on the grass, socialize with friends or find time to study. As Mike McGowan noticed, "Hey, what's the use wasting lunch when you can talk with your friends for thirty-five minutes and scam on girls at the same time." Now, for the more time-efficient person, you may find yourself hurrying for a cubicle in the library, a chair in the Titan Center or even a shady spot on the quad in order to relax and listen to the music provided by the A.S.B.

"I think we should have music everyday, it makes lunch a lot more fun and sets me in a good mood for my following classes," complained Doug Potter. Lunch was the time of day where students could express themselves and take a break from the action.

Pep Rallies Prevail

By Tami Watkins

"Gawd! We have the most unspirited school," was one complaint from a "concerned" student during the reading of the ASB suggestion box. There were a number of different pep rallies hosted on the quad as well as the gym throughout the year. The typical rally consisted of a cheer or dance by the cheerleaders followed by a contest, class yell or athletic presentation. Then, after the initial pep rally, music was played.

The one pep rally that stood out from the rest was the "Level The Mount" performance. A well-rehearsed skit featuring Dr. Devil and Sam Titan was performed during this Titan-time assembly. The story of "The Devil Dozer" promoted school spirit by convincing Titans that their administrators, cheerleaders, and a little old lady from Rancho Bernardo were being swept into the jaws of the Dozer, which was controlled by the Mt. Carmel favorite, Dr. Devil. Doug Grabenhofer felt, "It was really radical!"

Throughout the year the ASB did their best to promote spirit and give the student body a chance to participate in the activities. Brady Hamilton stated, "The pep rallies are a good idea, but if there are none, people get mad, and if there are some, people complain about how bad they are."

Debates and Making Decisions

By Jenny Selser

"Political what?" asked an interested student. This seemed to be a question asked by many before October 28, the date of the political faire held every other year. The senior civics and economics classes carefully planned and organized the faire. Such organizations as Right to Life, League of Women Voters, Planned Parenthood, and the Sheriff's Department displayed their services and expressed their opinions. Representatives from the Young Democrats, Teenage Republicans as well as liberal and Independent candidates came to gain favor for their causes. "I thought the faire was pretty interesting," remarked Kim Chesterfield. Political propaganda was available for the public to view in the quad area.

The debates attracted the most varied crowd at PHS during the faire. Shah Cheema stated, "The debates were very informative and successfully portrayed the views of candidates."

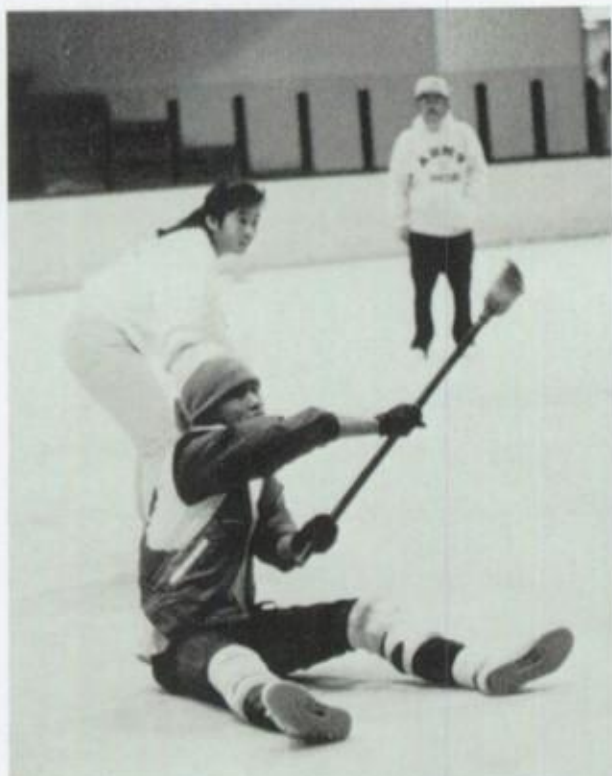

The overall turnout for the sixth political faire was good. The community as well as the students involved put in their best effort. James Fitzpatrick commented, "I thought it was a great success. The students learned a lot about the entire political process."

BROOM HOCKEY

Breaking the Ice

by Tami Watkins

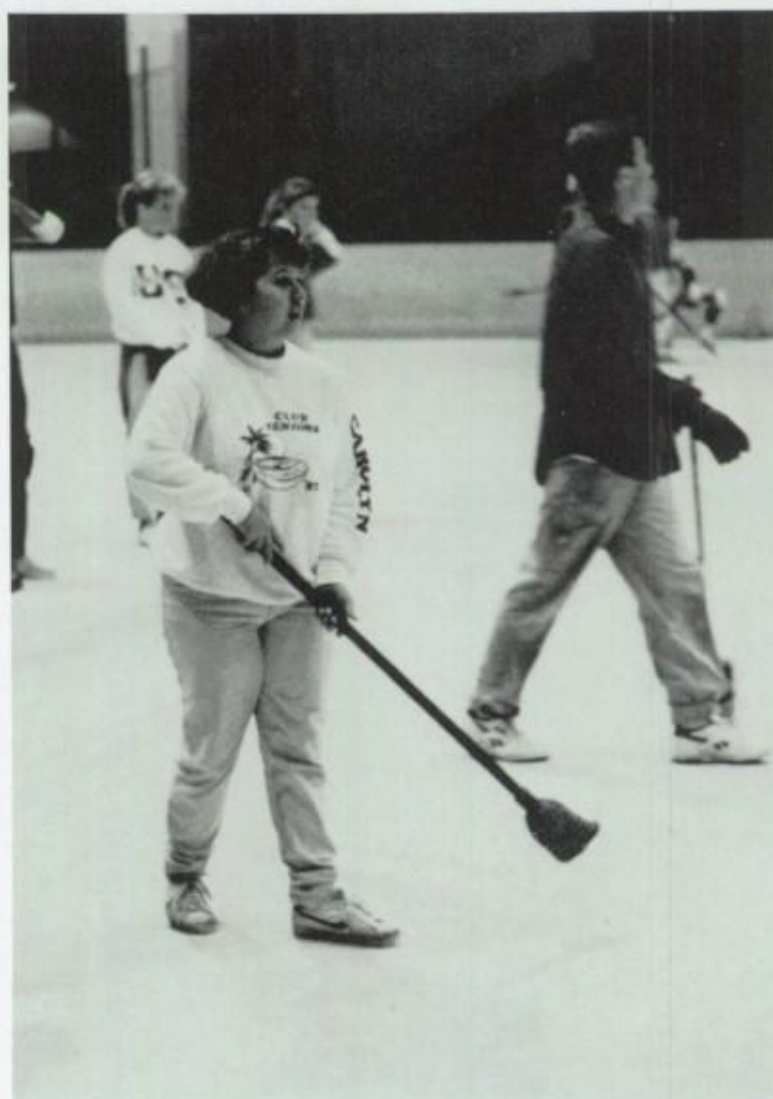

"Ouch! Watch out for the shins!" screamed one senior broom hockey player who forgot his shin guards. A few choice Saturday nights at University Towne Center Ice Chalet, the Class of '87 met to play broom hockey. Roger Love commented, "It was fun! I wish we could have used the entire rink and had two big teams. The best part of the night was when I scored the winning goal in the final game."

However, winning wasn't everything, survival was the name of the game. There were few injuries, from bruised bones to bloody noses. Tami Marko recalled, "My mom told me to wear a face mask. Though I hurt my nose, at least I didn't break it. It was all worth it — I had a blast!" Then, there were those that enjoyed the physical part of the event and got into playing hockey, and not just standing around doing nothing. Steve Toumi said, "A brutal, awesome, physical and exhilarating game of broom hockey sure made my weekend."

No matter what happened at the broom hockey games, it was clean, pure fun of getting to know fellow classmates. Broom hockey was a social "icebreaker" for new seniors and old alike. The seniors kept in mind that "Leisure Rules" and as Ray Granados stated, "I sure had a great time. It's a senior memory I'll never forget."

A Time To Play

By Jenny Selser

"All right, places everybody!" Beyond the curtain nervous actors waited for the opening of The Time of Your Life. As the first play of the 1986-1987 school year was being planned, many devoted fans stood by with anticipation for another one of PHS Drama department's fine productions. Carrie Strom stated, "With the last-minute rush, I thought the play wouldn't come together, but from the beginning to end it had great atmosphere. Everybody was splendid, you could tell they worked hard at rehearsals. I left with a great feeling!"

Set in a bar in 1939, The Time of Your Life portrayed the interaction of many different characters and their distinct personalities. "The show was really fun. It all came together in the last week of rehearsals, and it turned out to be a great production," Chris Eakman commented. With strenuous rehearsals, dedicated set designers, light technicians, and all of the other people involved, The Time of Your Life was a play that the Drama department could be very proud of. With this thought in mind the students at PHS who haven't had the opportunity to participate in the Drama department or see one of its fine plays produced will be educated about one of the most entertaining aspects of Poway High if ever given the chance. Nazi Khadem summed it all up when she said, "The last night of the play was really disappointing. I wish that I had started acting in an earlier year of my high school career. This production was the neatest thing I have ever done at Poway High."

Practically eating the microphone, emcee Karen Kay announced the 1987 Airband winners, "Third place ... The Bangles, Second place ... The BeeGee's, and First place ... The Untouchable's!" Thundering screams shook the gym walls and the house lights flickered on. Due to much time and effort all the participants made it through another exciting Airband competition.

"I can't believe it!" exclaimed Bangle, Sheila Black on hearing the results. "The night before was a feat in itself and now making it this far was great." Poway High continued the idea of having the night time performance the night before the day assembly. This year's event was emceed by Rick Rockwell from "San Diego at Large", and was judged by a panel of local personalities. Twelve bands competed for the top six spots in order to perform in front of the school. Go Go, Jennifer Meadows said, "We just want to be able to perform in front of the student body." All twelve of the bands were terrific and the judges had a difficult time deciding. "Every band on the stage was superb and should be commended on all the talent each group exemplified," complimented one judge.

Congratulations to all the participants! Finalists: The Chesterfield's, Sonny & Cher, Stevie Wonder, Bangles, The BeeGee's, and The Untouchables. Also, honorable mentions to: Young Rascals, LL Cool J, Bruno and the Heaters, The Beach Boys, The Go Go's and Marvin Gaye.

Their eyes met from across the quad and she smiled. He came towards her and stood tall, dark and handsome, then, she asked, "Uh . . . would you like to go to Winter Ball with me, Morris?" Morris gladly accepted and the date was set, December 12, 1986. Morris and Mindy were going to the P.H.S. gym to have a great time dancing, and socializing and celebrating the time of year.

Like Morris and Mindy, many students had a wonderful time at the dance. A junior, Ross Furukawa said, "The fun atmosphere set a good tone for the evening and the music was really good." Cat Tracks provided the popular swinging tunes most everybody likes. As well as music the decorations supported the theme well. For example, Jeff Miller recalled, "The gym looked really nice and I felt like I wasn't back at school for another theme dance." Senior Holly Thomas exclaimed, "It was more of an experience rather than just another dance, because of the time of year and being the only winter dance. Everything was perfect, the music and decorations, everything!" The sophomore class created a "Winter Wonderland" full of enchantment for all those who attended.

Cruising Carib Style

By Jenny Selser

The Sadies' Club Caribbean dance put on by the seniors, class of '87, was a dance that everybody who attended seemed to enjoy. The band, Borracho y Loco, entertained the dance goers with Reggae music and a climatic "Limbo down!" contest. Brian Korgel stated, "I loved them because I like to dance to that kind of music, and I loved the atmosphere they created." Borracho y Loco made a great contribution to the theme of Club Caribbean with their exotic instruments and many enthusiastic members.

The decorations were noticeable from a first glance at the gym door. A Hobie Cat Catamaran was set outside the gym and two windsurfers' colorful sails inside, gave the usually dull gym a festive look. "The decorations put you in the mood for the dance. The boat was really neat!" stated Mike McGowan. Probably though the most noticeable decoration was that of our famous mascot, Tommy Titan. The usual proud and mighty Titan was "hangin' loose" on this occasion. Tommy was dressed in flowered baggies shorts, dark glasses, a "life's a beach" tee-shirt, and he had his faithful surfboard and ghetto blaster.

The seniors put together one of the most entertaining and well-planned theme dances in the Sadies' tradition. With the gym's outstanding decorations and a great band, the night was considered a huge success. "The dance was crazy, unique, and fun. I think everyone had a great time!" exclaimed Kris Rudzinski.

A Moon-Splashed Evening

By Jenny Selser

The class of 1988 continued the tradition of the Junior-Senior Prom this year with a new twist of flair. Unlike the locations of past proms, this year's was held at Sea World, Mission Bay in the new pavillion. Some skeptical prom-goers felt that this location was unusual. But upon hearing comments such as, "Hey, George, we can go feed Shamu if we don't like the band!" The junior class was determined to make Prom very successful. Bob Champion, junior class advisor, stated, "Sea World provided a fantastic blend of natural beauty that, along with student elegance, provided the basis of a night to remember."

The evening turned into one of sheer delight for many who attended. The pavillion, which was enclosed in glass, was decorated with candles on the tables and throughout the inside, giving the effect of a glowing environment. Tall Grecian columns with flower pots and green plants accented the romantic mood of the room. And an extravagant Swan ice sculpture that was placed by the hors d'ouvres was extra special. Mika Phinney commented, "Everybody seemed to really enjoy the Prom this year."

Boys in formal tuxedo attire and girls in their beautiful dresses danced to the music of Cat Tracks, a band popular with Poway High in the past. When the couples began to tire, the serene environment of Japanese gardens and well manicured grounds became an ideal place for a Moonlight Serenade, the theme of the Prom. Shelly Hayes, one of the Prom commissioners, stated, "I was really pleased how everything came together in making Prom 1987 a success."

A glass enclosed pavillion provides an unusual setting for the prom.

"Forget dancing! Let's go play in Cap'n Kids World," exclaims a happy couple.

Athletics

The Junior Varsity Cross Country team runs with confidence through the course at Kit Carson Park.

Back In Action!

Poway High School athletic teams returned to school anticipating another successful year of athletics. Junior David Delaney stated, "I'm fired up about hitting the courts again." Many of the 22 teams, including: basketball, football, cross country, volleyball, and waterpolo, began paving their roads to success over the summer. They had various workouts and practices in order to prepare themselves for the coming season.

Several factors clearly foreshadowed that this year of athletics at Poway High School was going to be unlike any other. One case in point was, the long-awaited return of a genuine home football game. After a substantial amount of reconstruction, our stadium was, at last, ready to field one. The Varsity Football team, overwhelmed by the fact of playing on its own turf, expressed its gratitude by pulling a major upset over 2nd ranked Granite Hills. With this initial moment of glory, Titan athletes along with the rest of the student body could sense further success in all of the sports to come.

Participating in school sports proved to be extremely demanding for Poway athletes. "I have a hard time budgeting my time between sports and schoolwork because concentrating on both is difficult," commented Marco Mendoza. However, in their quest for achieving athletic superiority, Titan athletes were willing to make the commitment.

By dedicating themselves so deeply into their respective sports, teams hoped to match, if not go beyond, the accomplishments of last year. With several of our teams coming off very successful seasons, athletes looked forward to being even better. In addition, determination burned wild throughout all the teams. It was obvious that athletics at Poway High was on its way up. As a result of this strong will to win, team spirit was more evident than ever before. Pep rallies, team picnics on the quad, and other various gestures by teammates enhanced the performance of the teams. This enthusiasm, along with all the other aspects, proved that Poway High athletes were back!

Varsity Tennis player, Dominique Rosano, focuses all of her concentration on returning the ball across the court.

Striving To Be The Best

by Jon Jaro

"Finish strong! Let's go, finish strong!" This chant of support could be heard at many of this year's Varsity Cross Country meets. Members of the Boys Varsity team were constantly encouraging each other to give 100%. Kevin Malloy believed, "Everybody gets along so well that we can push each other without any dissension." This special ingredient, combined with hard work and talent rewarded the Titan men with another winning season. The Varsity team did well in league competition by finishing with a 4-2 record. They also posted impressive performances at several invitationals, including: 3rd place — Dana Hills Invitational, 5th place — Mt. Carmel Invitational, 2nd place — Southern California Invitational, and 4th place — Mt. San Antonio Invitational.

Much of their success was due to a balanced amount of talent. Although the team lost a few good runners to graduation last year, the team retained much of its strength. Travis Higgins pointed out that, "We have plenty of talent, but we're still a close knit team. No one stands out." In addition to this talent came plenty of hard work. Summer programs and after-school workouts greatly strengthened the team's abilities. Bill Santos said, "Being around so many talented people makes you want to work a lot harder." Coaches Schaitel and Embrey played vital roles in making sure that all of the hard work paid off. They brought out the best in each runner while maintaining a friendly relationship. By doing so, both had gone over and beyond the ordinary coaching duties. Travis Higgins felt, "Coach Schaitel knows what we feel and think." Bryon Devore described him as, "A coach during practice, but our bud in the halls, while Bill Santos looked to Coach Schaitel as a "Father-figure." Obviously, the relationship between Coach Schaitel and his runners was far beyond just a coach/runner one. There was something really special here. As a result, the runners' desires to do well in races became that much more intense. In turn, Coach Schaitel wanted to do his part in improving each runner. With all of these factors combined, it's evident why the Boys Varsity team proved to be so successful. Coach Schaitel wrapped up the season by saying, "This year's team has been the most rewarding team I've ever coached."

"If you're not doing your best, you shouldn't be out there."

MVP

This year's choice as MVP for the Varsity Boys Cross Country team was Bryon DeVore. Bryon, only a junior, began running at the age of 8. One of the many highlights for him this year was finishing 3rd in league. Bryon felt the biggest influence on him was Coach Schaitel. In addition to running, he also enjoys tennis and volleyball.

His plans for the future include attending UC Davis or UCSB, and entering the field of architecture. However, with 1 more year left, Bryon and Cross Country have even more to achieve.

J.V. Runs Undaunted

by Jon Jaro

Often times, participating at the Junior Varsity level means being overshadowed by the Varsity team. However, this was not the case with this year's J.V. Boys' squad. In fact, being on the J.V. team, instead of the Varsity, turned out to be a really big plus for the guys. Brad Roth felt, "It (not being on Varsity) makes you work harder to get there." Following in the footsteps of the Varsity, this year's Boys J.V. team ran very well. For a big portion of the season, these Titans did not allow one single point in a meet! They went on to go undefeated in league competition and were crowned the Palomar League champs. Obviously, there must have been some key to this success. John Schnurer stated, "The coaches really bring out the best in us." This was due to the fact that the J.V. had similar workouts to the Varsity, and were treated much the same by both Coach Schaitel and Embrey. Brad Roth added to the reason for success by saying, "We run in such a great pack that it makes us hard to beat." Although each person had the desire to be on the Varsity, each believed that, eventually, they'd get their chance. John Schnurer summed it up by stating, "Someday we'll get the spot-light." Surely, with all their skill and ability, these talented Titans will be on Varsity soon. And when they are, keep your eyes peeled because they'll be worth watching.

Staying In Stride

by Jon Jaro

"Get behind the line. Everyone set? Bang!!!" Off they went, excitingly running in their first Cross Country meet as freshmen. Despite the trials and tribulations they each had to face as freshmen, these young men adjusted rather well. Most of the guys found fitting into the Poway High Cross Country program easy. Dan Travers stated, "John Steffens and Kevin Malloy are like big brothers." The Freshmen team was accepted by the other squads, and much like them, were very successful. This year's team posted an impressive third-place finish at the Dana Hills Invitational and an even more remarkable second-place finish at the Mt. San Antonio Invitational. Three runners came in the top twenty at Dana Hills, while another three runners came in the top fifteen at Mt. Sac. How did these freshmen accomplish such feats? Darren Malloy said, "The guys work real hard and we really want to win." Chris Crosier added, "We work hard but we also have a lot of fun out there." It's plain to see that these young Titans have the winning attitude. Combine this with all the talent that they, clearly, possessed and we obtained something quite special. With this in mind, Cross Country at Poway High School appeared to reach new heights.

Success: More Than Skin Deep

by Jon Jaro

Depth, as defined by the Webster's Dictionary, is "the condition or quality of being deep." Not only was this year's Girls Varsity team deep with talent, it was deep in friendship as well. Senior Kim Uyeda, a four-year member of Cross Country, stated, "This year's team is the strongest so far." Although the lady Titans ended the season at 3-3 in Palomar League competition, they made it

"We always help each other. No one is left behind."

— Carrie Gelwix

up at the various invitationals that they competed in. The results were: 4th place — Dana Hills Invitational, 4th place — Mt. Carmel Invitational, 4th place — Southern California Invitational, and 3rd place — Mt. San Antonio Invitational. Their key to success was the consistent performance by all the runners. Coach Schaitel was able to use every ounce of talent each individual had. Junior Jill Brawner, a first-year member of Cross Country, remarked, "He has high expectations and wants us to give 110%." The girls promptly delivered what had been expected of them, and found themselves extremely potent with ability. As a result, Coach Schaitel and the team developed a strong bond of friendship. Carrie Gelwix said, "He (Coach Schaitel) is a coach, but we look up to him as a friend." "He's someone to count on and trust," added Kim Uyeda. Despite all of the ability that each person possessed, the girls weren't running for themselves. "You run for the team more than for yourself," replied Jill. This type of attitude produced a unique relationship within the team. Carrie stated, "We're all really great friends." "Everyone makes an effort to get along," remarked Jill. The positive chemistry of this year's Girls Varsity team is surely an indication of what lies ahead in the future. Kim closed by predicting, "We can only get stronger!" With so much going for them already, there's no doubt at all that they will become even better in years to come.

MVP

The MVP for the Varsity Girls Cross Country team was Lauren Anderson. Lauren, a senior, capped off her third year of running with several accomplishments, including finishing 3rd in CIF. She claimed that her dad was a big influence on her during the season and that the biggest reward of running was the friends she made. Lauren is still unsure about the future, but with so much going in her favor already, she's bound to be a success.

Kim Uyeda quickens her pace as she approaches the finish.

All In The Family

by Jon Jaro

"The fact we do so well is because of the coaching, our willingness to work, and the dedication and unity of the team." In this single statement, first-year runner, Lysha Younker, captured the entire essence of this year's J.V. Girls' team. Like the Boys' J.V. team, they enjoyed quite an excellent season. The lady Titans finished the Palomar League competition undefeated, making them the league champions. In addition, they also fared rather well at the invitationals. Their results were: 3rd place — Dana Hills Invitational, 2nd place — Mt. Carmel Invitational, 1st place — Southern California Invitational, and 2nd place — Mt. San Antonio Invitational. The coaches, namely Coach Embrey, were key figures in shaping the girls' team into one winning unit. Coach Embrey, who was making a difficult transition from Football to Cross Country, had a significant impact on the team. Katie Merrifield, another first-year participant, said, "Mr. Embrey is a big help. He's a special coach." "He wants everyone to do well," replied one person. The girls gladly returned the favor by working at an extremely intense level, and always as a team. Furthermore, they always gave each other plenty of encouragement, which brought about a sense of togetherness within the team. With such positive outlook towards Cross Country, there was no possible way these ladies could go wrong. And, as a result, they emerged winners through and through.

Lysha Younker is caught in a moment of deep concentration as she strives onward.

"Animal cheer" shouted someone and the girls prowled around the court growling at one another. Team captain Paige Smith explained, "It's the team's way of getting 'up' for the game. The growling puts us in a good mood, ready for the competition."

Finishing the season undefeated, all agreed that the key to their success was unity. Coach Mary Cooper called them "The best team I've ever had." Zoe Anastas said, "We join together to get things done. Everyone gets along with everyone else." Judy Egan added, "We're all friends, we stick together and push."

"Another plus besides cooperation is our strong fundamentals. We don't have any weak areas," stated Cindy Beers. Each game radiated with the team spirit and devotion felt by each girl. "Everyone wants to win and tries harder. Our spirit really brings us alive," expressed Susan Napierala. Enthusiasm prevailed on the court as the girls cheered one another on and growled.

Coach Cooper credited her team's success to three key factors. "First, the team has a lot of depth. Any six girls on the team are good enough to win league. Second, they all support each other. And third, Coach Sarver-Reis worked with them over the summer; they came to me ready to play.

At the end of the season Paige Smith remarked, "We work well together. Everyone has a lot of talent. Even in one season I saw my teammates strive for more and improve."

Spiking for Success

By Jennifer Stampfli

"Eat Nails," a favorite cheer from last year, psyched the team up before their games and gave them confidence. Titan spirit and motivation were further enhanced by warming up to Chuck Berry tapes. Teamwork and intensity, two key factors in volleyball, were strong assets for the Poway team. Lynell Stokes commented, "We possess a great deal of togetherness and talent. Team unity makes us a great big family." Christie Hoover added, "This year we've come together as a team. We work together to win and don't play as individuals."

Only five of the twelve team members were playing Varsity for the first time. This gave Poway a strong team of returning players, all with exceptional athletic talent. Coach Lisa Sarver-Reis considered the inexperience of the new members an advantage. "The young players are hard-working and always willing to improve." Amy Boyer also saw improvement throughout the year; "I've seen my teammates go from 'ok' players to top-notch ones."

They attribute their success to strong fundamentals and their great coach. Cheri Boyer explained, "The team has lots of depth; in general there are no weak areas.

Passing and hitting are especially strong." Coach Sarver-Reis agreed and added, "We have great individual talent. My philosophy as a coach is to strive for the best the team is capable of and to work with the talent the girls have."

About their coach, the entire team felt, "She's tough but she's great!" Added Charry Korgel, "She's very intense and expects our best but she's brought us a long way from the beginning of the season."

The team's hard work and dedication were rewarded by finishing first in the Palomar League. At the beginning of the season Linda Bertran predicted, "We have a very good shot at C.I.F. and hopefully we'll get past the first round in state, a first for Poway."

Junior Charry Korgel started playing volleyball at Twin Peaks because "it looked like a fun game with plenty of excitement." This year she primarily played back row. About her position she exclaimed, "I loved it! It involved diving all over the place and digging up balls." Playing for Poway was especially enjoyable because "Our team was close. The net separated us from the other team and kept us together." Overall she thought, "Volleyball is good because anyone can play it. The fast game and easy rules make it a great spectator sport."

Back in the Lineup

By Julie Hartman

Tremendous feelings of excitement stemmed from all the spirited Titans who scrambled into the shiny stadium stands to view the first real home football game. This year's Varsity football team began the season with a might bang. Beating Granite Hills, ranked second in the county, was a first-rate surprise and helped keep up the team's confidence.

Along with a fresh stadium setting, the football team also worked with a new coach. "Coach Elrod changed our attitudes to a more positive and winning side," expressed offensive guard Scott Page. Runningback Mike Cormier stated, "He explained things clearly and he respected you as an athlete."

However, the year had its share of minuses as well. The team lost the Kiwanis cup to the Sundevils, and the Homecoming game was a disappointment to the school too. Coach Elrod explained, "Performing at their best was a problem for the team during the second half, but even through the downfalls the players showed character. Our defense was strong and everybody worked hard to improve. I am really happy with the team's efforts."

This year the Varsity football team progressed through much trial and error, and came back from a long losing streak in time to squash San Pasqual for a thrilling Halloween treat. Dan Millard commented, "We had fun playing the game every time. This year's team consisted of well-rounded people that stuck together and helped each other."

The Poway football team suffered its share of injuries, and though they ended up with more downfalls than wished, the members never thought of quitting. In fact, the football players grew more confident with themselves and learned the importance of discipline.

Scott Page remarked, "It looks like the future holds a better trained and a finer equipped Poway High Titan football team."

we achieved more."

This year's football team elected John Ashworth as the Most Valuable Player. His friends encouraged him to be the kicker for the Titan team and John thought it would be fun. His comment after he found out his new title was, "I felt I had made an impact on the team and that they respected me for my athletic ability. Also, I want to thank Coach Martin. I never could have made it without him." John's agenda for the future included earning a scholarship for football, and a career involved with sports medicine. Good luck, John.

Caught in a moment of speculation, this Titan appears to have forgotten what to do with the ball.

Talented Titans Gain Recognition

By Julie Hartman

"Touchdown for Poway!" The outlook for next year's Varsity football team appears more than promising. The Junior Varsity team consisted of numerous talented athletes. Coach Champion remarked with enthusiasm, "It's been a really good year. We have some very skilled running backs and receivers, and each year the team climbs closer to the top. They were fun to coach and I could see improvement almost every day." As for how the players felt about Coach Champion, Dave Perdue cheerfully stated, "Champ's easy to get along with. If you listen to him, he'll listen to you." Linebacker, Dave McClain said, "Coach Champion kept the game fun, which is one reason we did so well." These terrific Titans not only overcame experience problems, but they dealt with some rough competition and had their share of injuries which contributed to their losses. On the whole, the team felt that their strenuous workouts were worth the effort and it showed with each succeeding game. "I expect next year's Varsity to be in contention for the league and CIF championship games," said athlete Dave Perdue. Sophomore Titan Dave McClain stated with pride, "This is definitely a new era for Poway High football." Good luck to next year's top Titan team.

Frosh Team Surprises All

By Julie Hartman

"Huddle!" yells player eighty-one. The other athletes bustle over towards the voice to confirm their next strategy. With the helpful coaxing of Coach Franzen, this year's Freshman football team played much better than anticipated. Frosh athlete Danny Miller said, "It was great to see how the team improved since the first week." The freshmen took their games very seriously. With this attitude they were able to achieve an awesome record of seven wins and only two losses. Coach Franzen commented, "After the San Marcos game and then the 'throwing' victory with Mt. Carmel, every person on the team realized that they just wouldn't quit, no matter how tough the opposition was. The most important thing for the kids to learn is that they must recognize that individual goals aren't as important as team goals." If the rumor of a new and improved era for PHS's football games has been spreading, it's definitely true for the class of 1990. Freshman athlete, Chris Rzewski said, "It's been an exciting first year on the PHS football team, and I'm looking forward to next year." Overall, the freshman football team pleased the entire school.

Polo Competition Rises

By Kristen Yamasaki

The crowd froze and time seemed to stand still as the last ten seconds on the clock slowly ticked by. The ball suddenly hurdled its way through the air towards the goal. At the last instance, the goalie blocked the ball sending it splashing back into the water. The Varsity team Water Polo team started with a winning bang as they won their first games. They continued to win even though Coach Miller remarked, "It was an extremely strong league this year. We're one of the top ten in the county even with the strict competition. There are nine teams in the conference with four teams several games below us and five that were in the range of about one goal apart from us." Maybe some of the reasons for being one of Coach Miller's better teams, was that, "We had a united, very close knit group," remarked Co-captain, Dan Thorsfeldt. Trey Freelen added to that feeling with, "We had a comfortable talking atmosphere, but I think the experience and time spent in the pool helped."

"We had a comfortable talking atmosphere this year," — Trey Freelen.

With the scores from the games, the Varsity either won by a lot, (they beat San Pasqual 25:12, and Carlsbad 21:7) or lost by about one point. They won sixty percent of their games overall. To finish off the season, Brian Napierala, "the standout and best hole-man in the league" replied, "We had both the talent and the experience for a great team."

JV: Reaching the Sky

By Kristen Yamasaki

"Ah, the middle child. Ask any psychologist. Yes, the troubled child. Why, did you ask? The answer is simple. They are no longer the baby of the family who is pampered, nor the praised and glorified older child who is constantly getting attention. This image then relates very well with the JV Water Polo team, correct?"

This year, the JV was nothing like the normal image of the "middle child." They let nothing, get in the way of playing out their season to its fullest. "They were an extremely hard working group. They seemed to kill themselves everyday, during both practices and at games," remarked Coach McCoy. Indeed in "killing themselves" during workouts, they were in great shape, which led them to win all their games except one, losing to Vista. However, they retaliated by beating them the next time they played against them. "They were the best team in the league, this year. They even picked up the exalted title of "League Champions." One of the problems which could have hindered the team's performance was the size. It was the largest JV team ever, with approximately thirty-four players. "Coach McCoy had a tough time trying to put everyone in the water, but he did a really good job," stated Ross Furukawa. It was nice to know, "No one complained about who was in the water, and one of the reasons for that was, we had lots of team spirit. Everyone rooted for each other," explained Robert Noel. With such a successful season behind them, almost no explanation was needed to sum up the advantages but, Keith Opstad did wrap up saying, "With Dave McCoy, along with the coaching staff and the natural skill, we definitely have had the right ingredients for a winning team." That statement highly supported the fact that they outscored all their opponents by double the amount of goals of all the teams in the league. Peter Secor concluded, "We have a lot of good talent and if we stick together, our future looks really strong."

Frosh Break the Usual

By Kristen Yamasaki

"Oh no, not that way, swim this way with the ball! For Heaven's sake, not the goal! The other one, not ours! Throw it to your teammate, yes, the guys in green!"

To most people, coaching the freshman water polo team could have been disastrous. A few of the frequently used reasons for a bad frosh team are the lack of experience and suddenly putting seven guys in the water together asking them to be a team and perform like one. Contrary to popular beliefs, this year's Freshman Water Polo team led by Coach Moore did none of the usual foul-ups, bleeps, and blunders associated with the title of "Freshmen." As stated by Coach Moore, "They had an extremely successful season. It was definitely a team effort since everyone played in all the games." It seemed that the Freshmen went beyond their potential as they beat most of the teams they played, including several with JV players. "They beat the competition even though they had less in-the-water experience (since there were twenty-four players and seven positions on the field at a time) and practice. They only had practice three days a week, twice were before school for an hour-and-a-half. They were the most motivated group I've had. They were always smiling and laughing, even at six o'clock in the morning." "Coach Moore taught us a lot. He didn't get mad, and he was really understanding," remarked Shawn Yamasaki. So with both the coaching and team talent, it was no wonder that Poway took first place in their last meet, the Frosh Tournament. Tom Vertetis commented, "We thought we had a good chance at coming in first, but we were still kind of surprised when we won." Coach Moore added, "If they stick together as seniors, they have a great chance at CIF."

Hard Coaching Pays Off

By Naomi Kusano

Coach Yarnell felt very pleased about this year's Varsity team, and there seemed to be a lot of competition among the players. Although the team felt competitive, they still felt very close to one another. Everyone seemed to get along especially well this year and no one ever felt left out. Stacy Harris said, "The team is great. We're almost like a family. We have problems, but we can always work them out." The girls did many things together and were very supportive of each other. One of their favorite things they did together was gossiping and laughing on the bus coming home from their tennis matches. The bus rides home weren't the only fun things they did, as Deena Mueller stated, "I liked the way Mrs. Quaresma brought foods and snacks for us to the matches." Aside from all the fun, the team practiced hard every day, except when they had their tennis matches. Coach Yarnell felt the strongest points in the team was obviously

Carla Quaresma at single, but she was also proud of the play of both doubles teams, Dominique and Jodi Rosano and Deena Mueller and Laura Newmark. The graduating seniors, Lisa Calhoun, Stacy Harris, and Dominique Rosano were all this year's team captains. When asked

"Coach Yarnell is tough, but her hard coaching always pays off in the end." — Jennifer Lukenbill what gives her the winning edge, Lisa Calhoun answered, "Knowing that I'm a senior and it's my last chance to be recognized for my athletic abilities." Jennifer Lukenbill said, "Dominique was always there when we needed her and she would always make us laugh." The senior team captains will all be missed by the team and also the coach. "It's always hard losing your seniors," added Coach Yarnell. "It's sad in some respects and happy in others."

MVP

Carla Quaresma was voted the Most Valuable Player of the year for the second time in a row. "It's a really good feeling to win the MVP title," commented Quaresma. At 8 years of age,

Carla started taking lessons and was participating in many tournaments by the age of 10. She feels that her coaches are the biggest influence on her matches. For next year, Carla stated, "Hopefully, we'll be able to go to CIF and this time, win the title!"

Spirit Helps JV Win

By Naomi Kusano

The word spirit may not mean much to some people, but it meant a lot for the girl's JV tennis team. Spirit seemed to be the key ingredient that helped the girls to the many victorious wins that they had. Most of the teammates felt joining the tennis team was a good way to meet many new people. Kristy Faustman added, "I've become good friends with a lot of them. We all support each other and don't really compete against one another seriously." The other girls on the team were not the only friends they had. The person who taught them the skills to be a good tennis player, Coach Parinello, is also one of their friends. "Coach Parinello is really supportive in everything we do," stated Carol MacIlroy. "He's not just a regular coach, he's also a friend." Karin Morrison also added, "Perry is really funny and makes being on the JV team a lot of fun." Although they all enjoy being on the JV team, their goal for next year is to get a solid spot on the Varsity team. Both Whitney Muelbauer and Karin Morrison are the top JV players and have played on the Varsity team as well. Karin has played doubles with Varsity tennis player, Carla Quaresma, and did quite well. Along with their teammates, Whitney and Karin are both working hard to make next year's Varsity team a good one.

Hoping to land the shot, Dawn Gigstad uses mental telepathy to tell the ball where to go.

Undefeated, talented, and enthusiastic characterized this year's girls junior varsity basketball team from head to toe. "We're like a family. We understood each other and worked well together," explained Sophomore Karmyn Clark. The group consisted of only two Sophomores and seven Freshmen. Coach Salzman commented, "The Freshmen were very highly skilled. I never had a problem of replacing players into different positions because we had such great depth. The team didn't depend on any one player. Every individual contributed and picked up points." "Coach Salzman was really helpful," remarked Tammy Brannon, "whenever he criticized a player he also complimented them. He made us feel good about ourselves." Basketball is an activity to keep in shape, but also to meet new people. Freshman Christy Fortney stated, "When I first started playing basketball, six years ago, it was just something to do. Now that my skills have improved I have grown to enjoy the competitive aspects of the sport." This outstanding team had everything required to succeed. They had excellent abilities to maneuver the ball on the court, they achieved a desire to win, and they were friends on and off the court. The time the players spent practicing, showed in their games and gave new hope for the future in girls basketball games.

Varsity Learns from Mistakes

By Jennifer Stampfli

Spaghetti dinners a few hours before the game helped this year's Varsity players psyche up. As forward Teri Miley explained, "It's mostly the same team as last year so we work well together. All of us are friends both on and off the court."

Yet, as Regina DaSilva commented, "We're doing well but not showing it in our games." The problem could have been the height advantage of their opponents. Most of Poway's rivals were more aggressive under the basket and therefore received more rebounds.

Stephanie Feaster also attributed the low game scores to a lack of spirit. "We interact well but we need more mental — we need to get the plays working." The team progressed in spirit by meeting for pre-game dinners and peppering each other up through secret sister gift exchanges.

Usually they played an excellent first half but slowed down after half-time. But Deanne Anastas had a positive attitude about the team. "We try our best, and physically we're as tough as we can be. With only two seniors, it's a young team so next year will be better." Coach Boulware agreed, "A year of learning and improving characterized this team. They developed into an aggressive defense team."

About their coach, both Tiffany Schafer and Jill Brawner agreed that, "He's tough but he knows the game and has our interest in mind." Added Zoe Anastas, "Boulware gets me to work harder and push myself."

Boulware closed the season by saying, "With the nucleus of the team returning and the addition of great players from the undefeated JV team, the future is very bright."

Senior Deanne Anastas was chosen as this year's captain by Coach Boulware because of her experience and expertise. Her jobs as captain consisted of acting as intermediary between coach and players and raising team spirit. This was Deanne's seventh year in basketball, a sport she joined because of the "action and excitement." Last year she was chosen as MVP. Although she played both guard and forward, she preferred the latter since "it's easier to make shots from close range." After graduation, Deanne plans to attend U of S.F. She also commented, "I wish the best of luck to the Varsity team in the future, they're a terrific bunch of girls!"

J.V. Jumps to Success

By Jennifer Stampfli

Wildly patterned shorts flash across the court after school in the Poway gym. They helped each player express his individualism and added spirit during the rigorous practices. Sidaron Wilson exclaimed, "We have a great attitude about basketball and our team is fired up!" The team found few faults with their season and contributed their success to a variety of factors. Gaby Awbrey felt, "The dependence we have on each other helps teamwork and comes easily since most of us have been together since junior high." Robert Melotti agreed and added, "We're all equal; everyone's important and we play as a team rather than individually." Poway had a strong offense/defense combination which kept the rivals busy at all times. All the players exhibited a great deal of experience, which made up for their lack of height, but they still had to "get tough," in the words of Awbrey. Coach Kapsimalis was new to PHS this year but he did an excellent job of teaching the team and was a friend of many of the players from their days at Twin Peaks. "Coach knows what he's doing. Even after we lose he keeps inspiring us," expressed Jim Roberts.

By Jennifer Stampfli

"Everyone on the team is a great player and all of us are good friends. We're definitely playing our best all the time," boasted Matt Uyeda about the freshman team. Their confidence and teamwork, combined with strenuous practices, gave Poway the league title. Shane Schanback explained, "We're in the game as a team, even those on the bench are concentrating and playing in their minds." Those on the bench constantly cheered on those running around the court. They gave each other strong moral support. Troy Nichols considered the team's attitude to be a key ingredient to success. "We get a roll going and everyone is in the mood to win.

If we have to get a point on the board, it will be there." Steve Gregosky commended Coach Embrey on "his expert knowledge of plays." while Zeke Awbrey praised Embrey for "his good strategy which he continually changes to confuse our opponents." The Frosh team consisted of thirteen strong players. Everyone performed well as a sub and, as Rick Anderson said, "There isn't five main players, all of us are good enough to back up the starters and win." Jason Ginger listed the deep bench as a great help in winning games. With a smile he said, "We have guys who want to score."

Varsity Develops Character

By Julie Hartman

"We didn't get to the meat and potatoes," explained highpost Leif Gigstad, "To play basketball well, you have to enjoy it, get at it, and get fired up. That didn't happen this year." From the very beginning the Varsity team reflected a disappointing season. Coach Saner stated, "It's hard to win a title every year. I know the Poway name has set a high standard for basketball and we did play some good games, but consistency is what makes a team good and we fell a bit short of that. Nonetheless, I enjoyed the players' company and am proud of their efforts." The coach, the team, and the school expected the Varsity to do better, but after the first three games and then to be defeated by Mt. Carmel, ev-everyone knew the Titans were in for a rough season. Each member encouraged one another to inspire more motivation, spirit and confidence. Gary Anderson said, "Basketball is fun because it's action-packed and you're constantly in motion." Brian Korgel expressed, "I enjoy the competition the most. I loved getting on the court and competing. Coach Saner is very dedicated and serious about the game and cares about the players as much as any coach I've ever seen." Nevertheless, the athletes kept their chins up and came through an upsetting season with a lot of educational memories. Senior Jeff Galka remarked, "The season did not go as well as we would have liked it to, but it was an overall rewarding experience."

The players listen intently to instructions from their enthusiastic coach.

The noise of the crowd doesn't phase Gary Anderson as he makes "that critical shot."

Perfection To The Fullest

by Jon Jaro

To say that wrestling at Poway High School has been "successful" in past years would be the biggest understatement of the century. The dynasty that Poway High wrestling has established for itself ultimately epitomizes athletic dominance. Past accomplishments include: several league championships, C.I.F. championships, numerous tournament victories, and a most prestigious state championship. This year's Varsity Wrestling team continued to display their well-known excellence by picking up where they left off last season and moving onward. They easily captured the league and C.I.F. crown, then went on to place 8th at the state tournament. When asked how Poway High wrestling managed to become so superior, many of the wrestlers considered Mr. Branstetter to be the single, most important factor. Garrett Story stated, "Mr. Branstetter knows what it takes to get every ounce of ability out of someone." "Mr. Branstetter pushes us real hard. He isn't afraid to workout with us like some coaches. He's probably the toughest guy in the room," added Marty Lewis. Although several of their victories were lopsided, the team became better and better with each match. One significant edge the wrestlers possessed was the encouragement and support they constantly provided for each other. Ricky Legaspi commented, "The whole team really motivates me; they do good and it makes me want to do good." Brian Davisson described it this way, "It is just you and someone else out on that mat and when you screw up, everyone knows. But when you win there is no other feeling like it." Fortunately, feelings often ran high and wild for this year's Varsity Wrestling team and with such a bright future ahead, these feelings should remain for quite awhile.

"In wrestling, no one else can do the work for you." — Ross O'Briant

Brian Davisson works to escape from his opponent.

J.V. Mirrors Varsity's Deeds

by Jon Jaro

To many athletes, the J.V. level is the half-way point toward the Varsity. However, several of the county's other J.V. teams were led to believe otherwise. To them, Poway High's J.V. wrestling squad was as good as some local varsity teams. And rightly so, since the ability and skill of these Titans was often far superior to others. How was such a high level of performance achieved by this year's team? Many of the wrestlers believed the coaching and their own willingness to work were the keys to being so exceptional. Brett Christensen stated, "He (Mr. Branstetter) knows what it takes to be the best and shows us how. Marc Todd added, "What attracted me to wrestling was the hard work and competition." The result was victory upon victory and an extremely successful season. Yet, virtually all of the wrestlers were not fully satisfied. Several still had more accomplishments in mind, including: winning C.I.F., winning Masters and placing in the state tournament. With their outstanding season coupled with additional goals, the J.V. set the tone for a bright future in wrestling at Poway High.

Security In Numbers

by Jon Jaro

Winning a state championship in wrestling does not happen overnight. A combination of hard work, dedication, talent and plenty of experience is needed. This may take years to obtain and an early start is a must. At Poway High School, it all began at the freshmen level. It is here, for many wrestlers, that experiences were first gained. Workouts, matches, veteran wrestlers, and coaches all aided in molding these young freshmen into future superstars. This year's freshmen team was the largest in Poway High history and many of these first-year wrestlers found getting accustomed to the program difficult. John Matteucci commented, "It was a little hard to adjust because I've never wrestled for a school before." However, by making a commitment and dedicating themselves 100%, these young Titans came out on top. Several wrestlers set high goals for themselves and strove forward all season to reach them. Stan Phillips summarized best the goal of everyone on the team by saying, "My goal in wrestling is to do my best to become a champion." With this in mind, how can anyone argue that these young hopefuls will be nothing short of fantastic!

Skills Bring Success

By Naomi Kusano

"This may be the most talented team I've played on. If we act and play like a team, we'll win," replied Chris Weber. Many of the players felt that their talents and skills helped them to be a winning team. "It is the whole team. We are all good players and have a lot of skills," said Mike Torres. Mark Truman agreed and commented, "I feel that it's our team skill that gives us our winning edge."

Aside from the natural talents, the leaderships of the team captains, John Ashworth and Dustin Seale, also helped. "Even though we did goof off a lot, both captains knew when to get serious and get things going," added Shawn Stewart.

Although there were many good games, many players felt that the Mt. Carmel game was one of the important ones. One of the reasons is obvious — because Mt. Carmel is our biggest rival. But Chris Nutting emphasized, "I think that the game really got us motivated."

Almost all of the members joined soccer for the same reason — the competitiveness and the fun of the sport. As Mike Torres replied, "I really enjoyed the satisfaction of winning and just being part of a team."

For next year, the players hope for the same winning season as 1987 and to take first place in the county and of course, win CIF. Shawn Stewart closed about the team by saying, "I feel that we had a very strong team with both new and old players. Therefore, hopefully, our success will carry over into next year's team."

Senior John Ashworth won the MVP title for the 1986-87 Varsity Boys team. Ashworth helped Poway win the 3A CIF co-championship title. He scored three of the five goals in the CIF playoffs, including one in the championship game. Not only did Ashworth make the 3A All-CIF first team, but was named the Player of the Year. John will leave Poway with a great senior year behind him.

Freshmen grasp for the stars

By Kristen Yamasaki

"Give 110% of yourself, not just 100%. I want more than all you have!"

Is it really possible to give more than what one has? Well, this year's Freshman Soccer Team proved that by dedication, teamwork, and practice. Those extracts could be seen as the Freshmen pushed into first place and maintained that ranking throughout the season. A lot of the credit was due to the coaching of Tom Martin. "Mr. Martin is a good coach because he pushes us to do the best we possibly can and, give it our all. He works us very hard but he doesn't do it to be mean but, for our own good, and we appreciate it," commented David Anet (#2). The team did soak up what Mr. Martin said using both their new knowledge and "our natural talent," remarked Shane Motts. "Everyone tried to impress him so we were highly competitive. We argued during practice but, during games, we worked as a team." Since everyone was so competitive, "the team captains rotated for every game so everyone got to lead the team at least once, stated goalie, Omar Al Nasser. When asked about how next year's team would do, Eric Freund (#3) replied, "I hope next year's Freshman Team is really good so they can keep up the reputation we set for them. Our team was competitive and skillful, with an added luxury of a good coach. These ingredients made our team dominant in the league."

Shane Motts smiles as he awaits in anticipation for the ball which he is suppose to block.

Darwinism: Striving to Win

By Kristen Yamasaki

"Cut throat competition." Back in the mid Nineteenth Century of the United States, rivals of competition thought it prevented new advances in technology and ruthlessly stamped out the weak. Now however, in the Twentieth Century, competition is praised. An excellent example of the competitive spirit was very evident amongst the Junior Varsity Boys Soccer Team. The one word quoted most frequently was "Competitive." "Because the competition was so high, we knew we had to work harder to be better," remarked Kevin Legg (#9). "We practice everyday afterschool for about two hours. We do a lot of running, drills, and game tactics. Everyone works together and both Danny Legg, our captain and Ryan Nutting, our co., did a good job keeping team spirit high," commented Bill Funk (#4).

Not only skill, or natural talent made this team. The words of Coach Tom Schwartz could be heard to inspire and teach. "Our coach is really good. He cares a lot about all the players on the team and knows how to play soccer," acknowledged Brian Gillespie (#22).

The team took some time to reach its fullest potential and Adam Muslusky (#20) observed that, "Our team had a Jekyll/Hyde personality. Somedays we can beat a first place team like San Dieguito. Other days we can't even beat Vista which isn't very good. Fortunately, we can play pretty badly and still be the predator instead of the prey." With that kind of transformation going on, it was no wonder Neil Kavanagh replied, "God knows what really gave us the winning edge so all I can say to next year's team is 'Thumbs up!'"

Team of Friendships

By Naomi Kusano

"Our team consists of a lot of big-time players that know how to create magic on the field," expressed Charry Korgel. The Girls Varsity Soccer team had to make a transition from the disappointing community soccer season to a successful high school league season. The team had a rocky start, with personal problems, injuries, and illnesses, but they had a team meeting and worked everything out. Coach Bradshaw remarked, "It proved to be challenging in the commitments and attitudes of the players."

Team captains, Suzzie Southwood and Kirsten Pinnell were both seniors with spirit and good ideas. Charry Korgel commented, "They talked to us when we weren't doing so hot. They lifted up our spirits and got unity between the players." Kirsten has been the captain for the past three years and she has extremely high leadership qualities and she is someone that the entire team can look up to and respect. "On and off the field, she is fun to be around and is very confident and hard working. To me, she is the most well-rounded player on the team," expressed Wendi Ashworth.

The Girls Varsity team was a group of very good, skilled players who really knew soccer. They are all good friends and have played soccer together in and out of school for many years. "Being all good, skilled players and all friends, we can easily play with one another with confidence and trust," admitted Carrie Gelwix.

When asked what she enjoyed most about soccer, Lisa Appel replied, "That it's a team sport as well as an individual one, and you can always improve."

Balancing their school work and soccer seemed to be no problem for them. There had been some late nights, but they managed to get the majority of their assignments done. As Wendi Ashworth stated, "As an athlete, you develop a habitual schedule. On days that I knew I had a game, I did my homework the night before or at school that day." Dedication like this from the girls proved to make a winning season. Graduating senior, Kirsten Pinnell added, "I wish for next year's soccer team to go all the way (CIF)!"

"The team is very dedicated towards the friendships with each other."

"Soccer is such a big part of my life," she expressed, "and my friends are great and give me a lot of support." Korgel was also named the Palomar League MVP and made the All CIF first team. Charry added, "I love the excitement the game offers. Hopefully I will continue to improve my game and win the elusive CIF title!"

Using Spirit to Win

By Kristen Yamasaki

"The Dumb Blonde Syndrome" Bubbly, giggly, and very air headish. "Got no brains at all" is usually used to stereotype a lot of girls. However, the Junior Varsity Girls Soccer Team threw that label in the trash with their combination of fun, laughter, and hard work. Dennis "Woodsie" Woods, the coach, Poway. Not only was it an excellent team, with natural skill, the girls also had great personalities and enthusiastic attitudes towards everyone. They were very cohesive. They all melted together, working tirelessly to the very end." Kathi Rothbauer and Patty Risher jointly stated, "A lot of us were on the same community traveling team for about four years, so we know how each other plays. With the new people, we get better each time we play. When we have to play a tough team, it makes us really use our skill, working harder together." They were the best team "ever" because they were the first team to beat Mt. Carmel. When Joi Wolski, the team captain was questioned about the year and what gave them the "winning edge," she commented, "Good unity, a lot of dedication and hustle, plus smiles helped us. We had fun, met new people and also kept in shape! Last year I can remember not having much fun, but this season, it was great!"

Frustrating, Yet Worthwhile

By Naomi Kusano

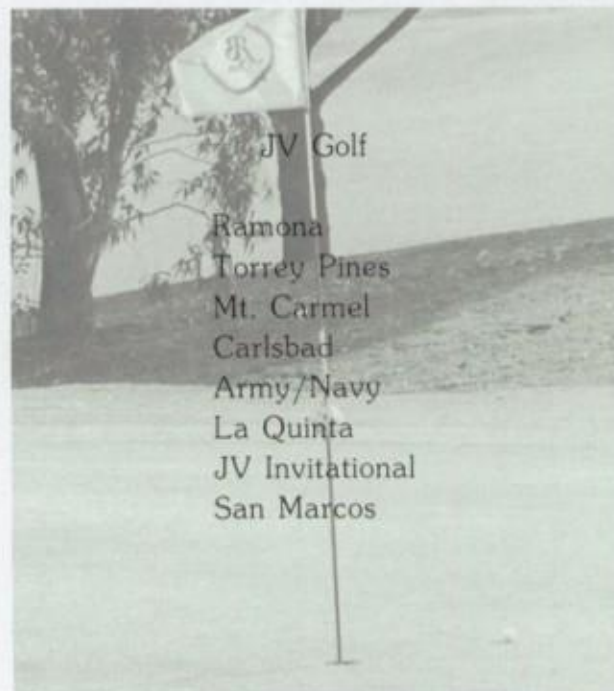

"Improvement and consistency are the hardest things about golf," admitted Jim Roberts when asked about the sport. Many of the players agreed, but also noted that they enjoyed golf very much this season. Matt Uyeda commented, "I liked the loose atmosphere and just having fun, being out on the course, walking and learning a lot about patience."

After a long day at school, the teammates found satisfaction in playing a round of golf. "It was relaxing," replied newcomer Sean Prendergast. "Golf to me," expressed Nat Hazard, "is a relaxing moment ... a home away from home."

Although golf seemed to be an individual sport, it was a team effort and the team as a whole, won or lost their tournaments. They all gave each other support and motivated one another to perform well. "The team with the most confidence won," stated Glenn Capitano. So, it was very important for the players to be sure of themselves and believe that they would do well out on the course.

Golf is a very hard sport in being consistent and patient, but at the same time, relaxing and worthwhile. Even though a single stroke may not seem like much, it can determine the winner from the loser. Jim Roberts closed by adding, "Sometimes I wonder why I frustrated myself so much trying to hit a little white ball into nine holes — it seems so useless. Then I realize that behind all of the frustration, golf really is fun."

Playing Up To Par

By Naomi Kusano

Hard work, skills, and determination are what defined this year's Varsity Golf team. The team consisted of a group of fine, young individuals, who practiced hard everyday, rain or shine. There were no returning senior players, but that didn't stop the team from having a successful season. "Our team this year wanted to win CIF a lot more than last year's," replied returning junior, Lance Seymour. The team felt strongly about winning CIF in both team and individual tournaments.

Like the JV team, keeping a consistent score seemed to be hard for the Varsity team. "It's hard when you have a bad game and then going out the next day and proving to yourself that you can do much better," explained Susan Pankau. Pete Secor agreed and added, "One day you can really have the touch and the next day, you won't. The frustration factor is intense."

Although being the only two girls on the team, Susan Pankau and Kay Kusano were treated as equals among the guys. "We had to practice just as hard as they did. If our scores weren't good enough, then we couldn't play in the next match," confirmed Kay Kusano.

The players plan to continue on in golf and hope for a future in the sport. "I hope to become a tour professional on the PGA," expressed Scott Humphrey, "If not, then become a teaching professional at a classy country club!"

Swimming ... We've Got Spirit!

By Kristen Yamasaki

Uppers, downers, Quaaludes, pot, we've got somethin' you ain't got, SPEED, SPEED, SPEED!

Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, ... (Silence) ...

YEAH POWAY!

This year's Varsity Girls Swimming Team had all the spirit it could handle! "It was definitely more spirited compared to last year's team. We had a lot of neat people, some real characters, with great personalities. I'm really pleased that I was the coach to such an outstanding team," Mr. Moore stated. The invention of the U-Can helped to boost morale. The swimmers placed good comments about each other in the can, and weekly, the person with the most comments received either a cap or goggles. There were two team captains for the girls and they were Kristen Rangel and Stephanie O'Malley. "They cheered us all on during our races and had good attitudes about the team during meets, "Chrissy Cordrey explained. "We had a dedicated team. We seemed to support each other more and that's what makes a team a winner." Vicky DeBerry added, "They seemed to be really good spirit risers. I thought this year's team was great! Team Spirit is what we had and that was important!" Dena Minkel expressed the team's attitude, "It's when you're standing on the block ready to jump in and you discover just how many friends you have to cheer you on." "The friendships we acquired within our team helped us to try our best. We could rely on those friends to be supportive in all cases, whether we won or lost (we had a lot of talent so we knew we could WIN!)," Stephanie O'Malley proclaimed. Mara Weiss summed up the season with, "Swimming was great ... being in the water, taxing my body, making friends, getting tan ... all of it."

Varsity Boys Kept Their Top Notch

By Sarah Massengill

This past year the Boys Varsity swimmers literally beat the pants off of their competitors. With the many returning swimmers and the many new recruits, they swam to an outstanding season. Keith Opstad stated, "We have the tools and the talents which make us a great team. Still, we really worked hard to perfect them."

Just about every day the boys were found perfecting their strokes, swimming up to ten hours a week under the coaching of Mr. Moore. "This was my first year with Mr. Moore as my coach and all I can say is that he was wonderful," added Todd Ogi. Mr. Moore projected a positive attitude which forced them to try to do their very best.

At the beginning of the season Rob Miller predicted, "Since we have a lot of good swimmers, we should do well this year." Rob's prediction became reality, and they began the season with an undefeated record thanks to the hard work-outs and team spirit. Also, we must give special note to the team captains, Ray Underberg, Mike Jacoway, and Mike Napierala, because according to Coach Moore, "These guys are excellent leaders and the source

"We supported and congratulated each other whether we won or lost." — Brent Alfonzo of our team's enthusiasm!"

In the future, the boys hope to, "swim faster, destroy Mt. Carmel, and place in the top three in C.I.F." With the excellent training and outstanding performances, bright promises of the future suddenly materialized in the present.

Yes, school can be tough for the newer and younger generation. This year's Junior Varsity Boys and Girls Swimming team made the best of their year, sticking together, and making friends. Even though there wasn't much time to talk during practice, they still met friends. "Eric (Vosenkamper, the coach) while around the pool is a total and complete dictator. "The thing I enjoyed most about the swim team was the acceptance. It's so reassuring to get out of the pool after a race and have people saying nice comments," stated Michelle. "I liked the self-satisfaction of putting out an effort as a team," Tracy McClellan proclaimed. Summing it all up, "Swimming is a terrific sport and I'm happy that I have the opportunity to continue," — David Hilbig added.

Supporting Victory

By Lori Raber

"This year's J.V. track team was like a family. We supported each other and, we all got along very well," commented Nicole Goudy. At each track meet members from different events cheered the other competitors on, giving them confidence and encouragement.

The coaches were interested in each member improving and doing her best rather than just winning. "My personal goal is to make this year my best and to push myself farther at each workout," stated Kris Sampson.

Personal achievement and helping others motivated the members. "I enjoyed the meets and the feeling of support we all felt from each other," commented Kim Chesterfield. Coaches Quaz, Martin, Jones and Schaitel all played a part in teaching and supporting the members this past year. "I feel this year the coaches expected more, and this increased the team's overall effort," many members agreed.

Although each girl had personal goals and motivations, the team profited from their effort and dedication. "One of our biggest accomplishments this year was our home meet where all of our teams won, it was a great feeling," commented Stephanie Allen. Support from all the other teams helped each team gain confidence.

Varsity Led by Motivation

By Chris Blackburn

Poway High's Varsity Girls Track Achieved new dimensions this year. These new dimensions included outstanding members in both the field and track events. This was due to the early spring workouts which gave the team members a strong base for starting off the season. At each practice they would break into individual groups in which they would get in shape so that they would be prepared for their upcoming meets. The first meet was on March 4 at Mira Mesa. Poway's Varsity girls proved to their competitors, that they were in excellent form and determined to do their very best this year. Coach Dan Schaitel stated, "Poway High has many excellent athletes that have the potential to be very competitive against any school." Looking back at the team's record you are able to see the reflection of a year full of dedication and reward for their struggle.

"Each member supports the other," —
Beth Young

Hard work is a key element for a successful year. On the other hand, track members agree that without the support of each other the team would have gone nowhere. "What motivates me the most is the support and friendships that you receive from each member on the team," expressed Beth Young. The team helped each other reach their potential by improving. This came in the form of support that they gave to each other. Their ability to help each other and work together as a team gave the Titans an extra motivating factor.

The year was full of pulled muscles, sweat, and dedication from each of the varsity girl track members. They couldn't have made it if it wasn't for the encouragement that they got from the coaches and each other. Track proved to lift the pressures of school for many as they all strived to reach their individual goals.

"Everyone on the team was really supportive. They always wanted to help you to improve," said Nate Houser. With an attitude like this one, it was no wonder why the Boys Freshmen Track team had many victories. The members of last year's team certainly proved that they could work together as a team rather than individuals. "The team got along great. In the more meets we competed in, the more unified we became," stated Jason Ginger. The hard work and practice was well worth the time and energy spent. "The thing that I liked the most about track was going to the meets and knowing that your efforts have paid off," said Robert Davis.

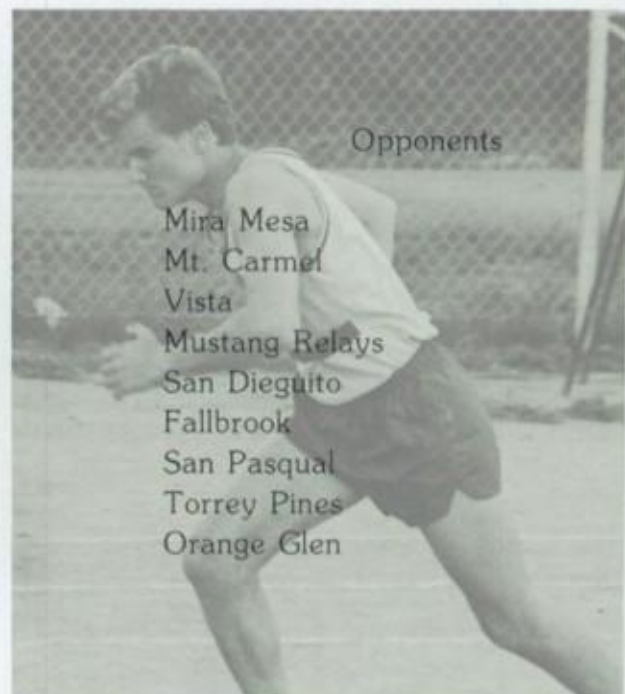

Along with the team members working hard were the coaches. "The coaches were very supportive. They motivated us to strive to work harder and improve. They were very patient in teaching us new skills," stated Nate Houser. "Mr. Jones helped me a lot. He seemed just like one of the guys," said Jason Ginger.

For some members of the team, this past year was their first year ever on a track team. For them, track was a new sport to be conquered. "Last year was my first year on a track team. It was a lot of work, but knowing that the team and school benefited, made it all worth my efforts," said Nate Houser.

Team Unity Yields Success

By Elisa Smith

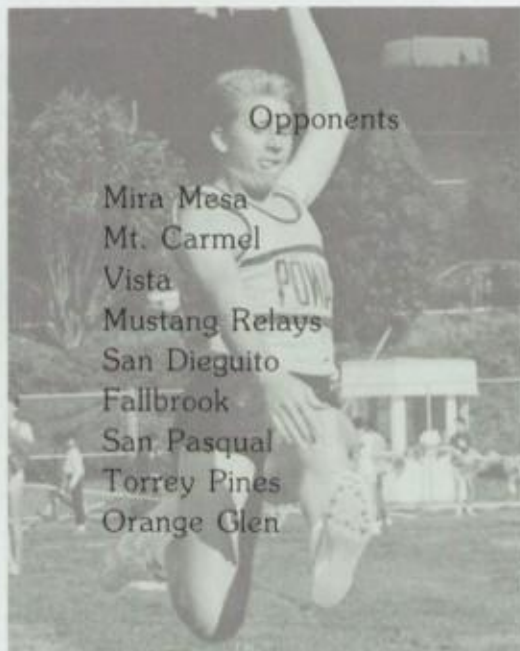

1986's league champions strove to reach the same goal in 1987. From the beginning of the season Coach Schaitel expressed his optimism in the team and its ability to be champions. "The most exciting thing about the team is the depth. We have four to six boys with a lot of talent in each event." This talent was evident when they toppled the Mount for a Poway victory on March 19.

Part of the team's success came from a positive mental attitude and team unity. Schaitel explained that the athletes became very close because "They all go through the same workout and a lot of positive rivalry develops." Jeff Haines commented that, "Team spirit and unity are major factors for a winning season." Todd Sallenbach enjoyed the "competition and team unity" while Dean Cortez said, "I enjoyed the people and it was a lot of fun!" Another big motivator was the honor roll consisting of the best times at Poway High since the '60's. "A lot of the JV boys have the talent and potential to get on the honor roll this year," said Coach Schaitel at the start of the season.

Through practicing speed, distance, and new techniques the JV Boys Track team was able to produce a talented group of athletes with an incentive to win. Dean Cortez summarized his feelings about track by saying that "The workouts were hard but in the end it was worth it!"

Runners Make Great Strides

By Julie Hartman

Like a herd of gazelles leaping and bounding over their hot, dry terrain, the Varsity track team swarmed around the perimeter of the Poway High Stadium. The team consisted of hard working individuals that had the desire and determination to do their best. "This years track team is the most talented I've worked with in eighteen years," exclaimed Coach Schaitel, who was very impressed with the athletes. "Working together as a team is important in track and they accomplished this extremely well."

Track held grueling practices every day after school and weekends. This kept the runners in top physical condition. Junior Bryon Devore stated, "Running is something I'm good at and I like to win, but winning doesn't happen without practicing." Jeff Miller remarked, "I liked the feeling of accomplishment I got after working hard at the practices and then doing well at the meets."

The Poway Track Team participated in various meets throughout Spring, and as they drew deeper into the season they improved their running skills. Senior John Steffens stated, "I've always wanted to be a good runner

"You can be an average athlete and still enjoy track." — Kevin Malloy and the track team was the best way to achieve this goal. Besides, running is great exercise." Senior Titan Kevin Malloy said with a smile, "The meets made all the practices worthwhile."

According to Coach Scaitel, "Track is the most technical sport. It dates back to the first Olympic events in Greece and has been studied the longest." Track is for people with determination and a desire to excel.

Varsity and Optional

Debi Quesenberry

This year's varsity and optional gymnastics teams, composed of many hard working athletes, leaped towards higher goals. This group of girls worked harder and had more enthusiasm than Poway High has seen in a long time. "This year's team is smaller in quantity compared to last year's team, but stronger in unity," replied Mrs. Ondler, the head coach.

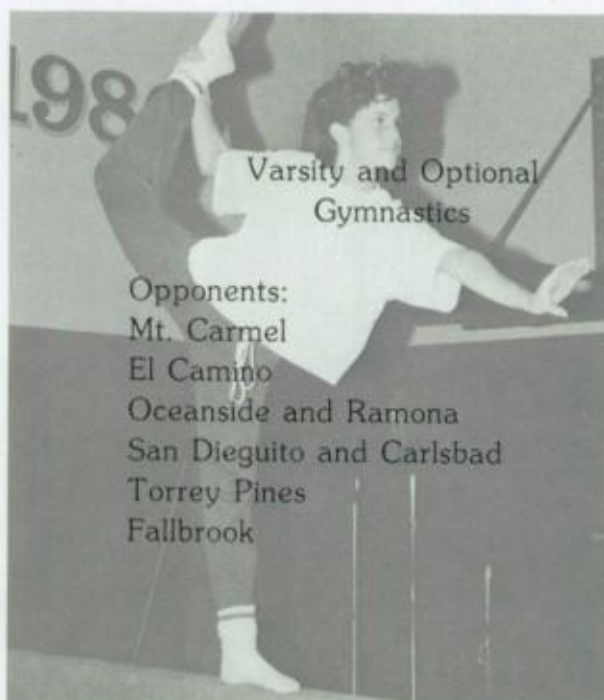

There were changes in this year's routines. The routines consisted of more advanced moves and were increased in the amount of difficulty. Coach Ondler worked with many strong gymnasts and pushed towards their goal to get as many girls to CIF as possible.

Kirsten Keithly, considered the most valuable gymnast, helped this year's optional team reach new heights by making up the most challenging routines. "Kirsten is always willing to try something new and that's what it takes," said Miss Menius. Her ability in all aspects of gymnastics, floor, beam, bars, and vault, made her a most important part of the team.

What gave the team the winning edge was their confidence in each other and their willingness to help each other. The attitudes of all the gymnasts led them into a successful year. The varsity and optional teams pulled together to make this year a winning one.

Determination Pays Off

By Elisa Smith

A great deal of talent, enthusiasm, and determination aided the gymnastics team throughout the spring season. Despite the slow beginning due to the need to share the gymnastics room with the wrestlers, the girls worked extra hard at their three to four hour daily practices. Another big reason for their extra hard work was a result of the fact that most other schools had gymnastics all year round but Poway did not. Even so, the girls enjoyed relearning and brushing up on their old skills while practicing new skills. Some girls even took the time for private lessons to enhance their performances.

Assistant Coach Menius explained that the team's success was due to the "confidence in each other. They were always willing to help each other. The more experienced gymnasts gave helpful hints to the first year members as to their strong and weak points and what the judges look for."

The main objectives of the team included concentration on individual goals as well as team goals, gaining experience and exposure for the new members, and hosting league finals. Melissa Webb said that, "We're all excited about hosting league finals here at Poway High! We're looking forward to a good turnout." Coach Menius expressed her conviction that "with drive and determination they should finish very strong!"

Fun and Games Forever

By Jon Jaro

"I think the team is special because we've played together before and off the field we're all friends," said Stephanie Harris. This statement captured the essence of this year's Varsity Softball team.

Many of the players had previously participated in softball leagues together and, thus, were accustomed to being around each other on the field. In addition, all of the players got along off the field as well. Another significant factor was Coach Barker-Ball. Her determination and desire to win sparked the team to do their best. However, at the same time, she managed to have fun and be liked by all her players. "She's honest, funny, and even acts like one of us," described Lynell Stokes. The team looked at the season optimistically, some of their goals included: constant improvement, respect, and an above .500 record. These goals served as a perfect example that winning wasn't everything to the lady Titans. Pitcher Christina Montgomery summed up the team's attitude by stating, "I hate losing, but if you played your best, then winning isn't so important." A unique system this year's team used were notebooks and discussions about the games they had played. By doing this, the team ensured improvement game after game. When asked to compare the Varsity Softball team to any object, the players had several interesting answers. Christina said, "We're a family. Good times and bad ones." Fortunately the good times outnumbered the bad, and the girls always got along.

Let The Good Times Roll

Jon Jaro

"Our team is like a giant cookie. The players are the chocolate chips and Coach Campbell is the cookie part," described 1st baseman Michelle Adame. The Junior Varsity Softball team earned the right to be called a cookie. The girls were united as a whole, with Coach Campbell holding them together throughout the season. "He takes the time to work individually with all the players," commented 2nd baseman Lysha Younker. As a result, the players showed their appreciation to Coach Campbell by constantly working hard and winning several games. Success came about through various reasons. Dana Timms believed that, "We play well because we work together as a team and always encourage one another." Much like the Varsity, these girls had played together in years past. So, becoming familiar with how others played was simple. In the end, the season was very satisfying and revealed much promise for the future.

"Pride. That which compels thee to do one's best, even when no one is looking." Throughout the season, the Freshmen Softball team lived up to this motto. Many of the girls considered this year's season to be extremely interesting. The team lacked a coach until Jim Cross, a volunteer, stepped into the coaching spot. His team welcomed him with much enthusiasm. "It was generous of him to give us his free time," replied 2nd baseman Alison Ingleby. The Freshmen team experienced several new things during the season. They included: "gay looking" uniforms and the smell of agriculture near the softball fields. However, aside all this, the team managed to win games and have a great time. Friendship also thrived as the season progressed. With so many positive things turning up, the PHS Softball program is bound for further success!

"Come on guys, keep practicing; I haven't seen any 'go-on-able' dives yet," yelled Coach Gehrke from the edge of the pool. The entire team loved their coach's laid-back personality, although he remained a "tough" teacher. In return, Gehrke described the eight-member team as hardworking and friendly. "All of them are willing to try any dive I ask them to perform. Their degree of difficulty has increased by leaps and bounds since the season's start." Trey Freelen called diving "an art from God. He gave me this gift and I use it to make Him happy." Dana Dodd said, "I dive because it's a challenge; I feel like I accomplished something and I'm always learning." Similarly, Kim Miller felt, "It's an individual sport so you're in control of everything instead of relying on someone else to finish off the play." "Diving is great because it's exciting and daring!" explained Derric Oliver. Although they competed against one another in meets, the Titans stuck together. They encouraged each other and shared advice on how to improve technique and bring their scores closer to a "ten." Each diver had a lot of depth, and Poway usually captured most of the points. Greg Stampfli's favorite part of diving was "flipping and spinning." He added, "Diving allows me to push myself to the limit."

Varsity: Pizazz Plus Power

By Julie Hartman

Refreshing spring weather not only invited new sights and new sounds, but also exciting sports like ... Volleyball fever! The fastest growing sport on the California beaches hit Poway High for the second year as an official competitive sport. The Boys Varsity Volleyball team took on the new season with dedication and enthusiasm. Coach Mike Ball stated with pride, "Once the team members started playing the game, they didn't want to stop. Some of the players took the game very seriously and their devotion during the practices showed in their games."

Volleyball is a sport that isn't normally introduced until the high school level. This makes it a good opportunity to try something different and see if you have what it takes. All of the team members heartily agreed that Volleyball is a fun game to play and they enjoyed the quick-paced intensity during the tournaments. Senior Pete Babich stated, "Volleyball is an easy sport to learn, but hard to master." Everyday, after school they practiced on improving their fundamentals, especially "passing." "We had a lot of talent on the team, but we needed to learn to work together more," commented Doug Potter. Senior Jim Miller profoundly remarked, "The success of this team depended on the unity of the squad."

The team enjoyed working with Coach Ball and respected him too. "He is a hard disciplined coach and very knowledgeable," said Pete Babich confidently. Through the season, the Varsity team progressed to meet their competitors with equal force.

They Set Standards

By Julie Hartman

Bump! Set! Spike! Guided by Coach Larry Higgins, the Boys J.V. Volleyball team made it through a successful season. Junior Kevin Kohler remarked with enthusiasm, "We had a good season. The team had no problem getting fired up. We had fun." However, the team also had to work hard to improve their games. Kevin Collins commented, "We needed to practice a lot to get the fundamentals down." The team practiced everyday after school along with the varsity team. "We worked well as a team because we wanted to do our best and be competitive," stated Kevin Kohler. The members agreed that Coach Higgins was easy to work with and he was very informative and helpful on their playing techniques. Junior Jon Hoffman summed it up by saying, "The team members figured that a positive attitude on the court and from Coach Higgins was very important in the outcome of the season." This attitude will have a lasting impact on the players as they become future varsity members in years to follow.

By Naomi Kusano

"Our entire team is friends and constantly tried to help each other play better," commented first-year player, Brady Hamilton. "It's not easy to stay friends when you're always trying to beat each other out of their positions, but we managed."

The 1987 season proved to be respected with a well-rounded JV tennis team. Although a fairly young team, they were very strong and did extremely well.

Coach Parinello always strove for excellence and brought out the best in his players. "I think our coach is a really great guy. He takes the sport seriously, which really helped a lot. It meant a lot to him when we won, therefore, we did our best to please him by winning," replied returning Junior Scott Fisher.

The game of tennis also seemed to be a challenge for the players. "Tennis is enjoyable because it is an individual sport and it's all up to yourself to win or lose," emphasized Chris Bryan.

Joining the tennis team has really satisfied the teammates. Scott Fisher closed by adding, "I have enjoyed every year of tennis I have played, but the last two years and this year of high school tennis for PHS have been the best. The coaches have certainly been a great help to me and everyone else!"

The two opponents faced each other from opposite ends of the court, a competitive stare stretched between them. With practiced ease, the Poway pro served. The fiery ball zipped by his confused opponent for yet another act. Not all of the matches during the '87 year went this well, but the team showed the league they weren't fooling around. "We had a competitive season," admitted Scott Basinger.

The varsity team welcomed many new faces this year, making it a younger group than in the past. "I believe it is to our advantage to have a younger group," commented Brady Hamilton, "because when they come back next year they will have more experience and will be stronger than ever."

The players learned a lot about being both mentally and physically strong this season. "Coach Campbell has been coaching tennis for many years," stated Jeff Foust. "He knows how to work us hard at practice so we can take the pressure that we have to face in a match." Discipline turned out to be the key word throughout the year and the boy's tennis team mastered it with hard work and long sweaty hours on the court.

In the past, there have always been certain teams that proved to be stiff competitors, and this season didn't differ. "Vista has always been our biggest rival," confessed Kevin McHugh. "We just had to take them in stride and give it our best shot." The two rivals met this year, as they have in the past, and the contest was close, as player battled player to emerge victorious.

The past season turned out to be one of boisterous victories, weary losses and most of all much learning and growing. The younger players gained knowledge and valuable experience that they can return with next year and use to their advantage. The parting seniors gained the advantage of discipline that will aid them in the years to come.

Hitting for Power

By Jennifer Stampfli

Poway's Varsity baseball team has grown in maturity since last year. Their better season can be attributed to an older, more experienced team with better hitting and fielding techniques. With practices averaging two to three hours daily, their abilities improved every day and in every game. "We're very fired up for this season and so far our games have been better than last year," commented Mike Scaggs. A majority of the team were Varsity veterans and old friends. This helped mold the players into one powerful team who acted together rather than as eighteen detached individuals. As Billy Wraith remarked, "Baseball is a team sport that teaches the importance of a joint effort. No one can make the game, or even a play, by themselves. We all have to rely on one another." Wraith epitomized the team's outlook when he said, "As long as I can help the team, I'll play any position." Another factor in the team's success was Coach John Harmon's dedication and experienced coaching. John Youngkin felt, "Harmon cares for our team a great deal. He makes the team his first priority and puts forth his whole effort to improve our skills. When we lose, he hurts more than us." While Chris Bentley enjoyed hitting the best because "it gives me a chance to show what I'm made of." Chris Bentley liked "The thrill of striking someone out when I pitch." Every member of the team was important for the success of the whole, but Phil Plantier especially stood out in everyone's mind. In the words of Mike Cormier, "Plantier is one of the best hitters in the county and definitely a strong leader on our team." The intensity and spirit of the Titans brought them a successful season against tough opponents. Steve Toumi reflected, "We strive to be the best we can be and if we lose, it just makes us pull together and try harder the next time."

The long and strenuous JV practices were made more enjoyable by Coach Nelson's attitude and the closeness of the players. Marc Pendleton described Nelson as "a cool guy who knows when to be serious and when to have fun." Second baseman Eddie Cornblum pointed out, "Coach Nelson relates to us both as individuals and as a team. He listens and sticks with us, even in the tough times." Not only did Coach Nelson remain supportive throughout the season, but the players bolstered one another's spirits and maintained a positive attitude about their abilities. "We consistently work together to produce results and don't let each other get down," explained Alon Banks. True to this statement, it required a team effort with everyone playing as a unit to win games. When asked about the edge the Titans possessed over their opponents, Bill Bertsch immediately replied, "We have excellent hitters and a great deal of enthusiasm, which keeps us going." Our success comes from determination and the energy needed to win," believed Pitcher Brian Rodems. Todd Sawyer best summed up the team's attitude by saying, "Poway's JV team has the players with the will and desire to overcome any odds we may encounter." Indeed optimism was high when Pendleton exclaimed, "Go Titans!"

Freshmen Determined

By Anaelisa Romero

"The team had a lot of heart and the will to win," said Tommy Peterson. Last year's team certainly proved that they had the will to win with an outstanding record of wins. But, winning the games was not all the team focused on, they focused on working together as a team. "We had a lot of different personalities on the team, but when the games came around we were unified as a team. The thing that I enjoyed about baseball was winning as a team," stated Tommy Peterson.

By spending so much time together, the team members got to develop an understanding with each other. "Coach Lekvold was a great coach. He pushed us to become better baseball players," said Mike Pedrotti. "Coach Lekvold expected perfection out of us, and we worked to give him just that," expressed Tommy Peterson.

Since this was their first year on a team at high school level, these players took the game seriously. As Pitcher Mike Pefrotti put it, "Pitching is a game of inches; it can make the difference between a win or a loss." Tommy Peterson stated, "Baseball isn't just a game; it's a way of life."

BACK TOGETHER

Never before has Poway High had such a wide spectrum of clubs and club activities as we saw this year. Clubs commissioner Tami Watkins did an excellent job in organizing the first-ever Club Rush week. During this week, each club was given the chance to inform students about their club and the activities that it had planned. Clubs such as American Field Service, Theatre Guild, and the Key, Math, and newly formed French Clubs were active. Though only a dozen groups participated in the event, a larger turnout is expected already for next year's rush. This week helped to visually publicize the great variety and number of clubs. Tami Watkins commented, "Poway High has so much to offer in terms of clubs that there is no reason to be bored here."

Poway High School expanded its boundaries for six new clubs on campus this year. The new additions such as Writers Anonymous led by Tami Marko strove to establish themselves on campus. With the wide range of clubs, the choices seemed endless. And with the endless selection, most students found the club that was right for them.

"Clubs are a definite means of self-expression," stated senior Tonia Reiny. With the diverse themes which bound together these groups, an equally varied variety of students was drawn. Clubs ranged from that of a politically minded format such as Model United Nations to those meant only to relax and have fun. Others drew students interested in an athletic-based club. Led by the prominent Varsity Club, athletes banded together for support and friendship as was the purpose of all the groups.

An inevitable aspect of club life was that of fundraising. Mr. Weiss' major role in the Math Club Snickers sale boosted profits enormously. It was a rare student who was not accosted by the mad salesman.

It was felt overall that clubs played a vital role in student life. Amy Blackburn summed it up by saying, "Clubs relieve the stress of school and give one a chance to meet people with similar interests."

ASB

Working Together

By Lori Raber

"This year's ASB made a goal to be the best, most active ASB ever," commented Brian Maienshein. This past year the ASB made many new traditions which led to a better unity with the student body and the group itself. They sponsored after-game dances, offered a suggestion box and organized committees to improve activities.

The ASB was in charge of most of the major events, such as Homecoming activities, dances and pep rallies. There was a lot of hard work done that was not as well known to the school. The ASB passed out various pictures, sold tickets at lunch, made signs and cleaned up after-school functions.

Each member had his own responsibilities to the school. Some of these jobs included publicity, arranging for bands to play, paper-work concerning expenses and posting coming attractions on the sign in front of PHS. "We knew we had personal responsibilities, and we expected everyone to do their share," replied Tami Watkins. After a general meeting each day during fourth period, the ASB did their own work.

"I felt that all the members of the ASB were compatible; this helped to get things done and made it a terrific year," commented Senior Matt Golden.

Bleacher Creatures

Bleacher Creatures hold nothing back when it comes to cheering

Spirited Titans Unite

By Chris Blackburn

"You'll find the nicest and most spirited people here," replied Heather McCleod when asked about the Bleacher Creatures. The Bleacher Creatures have come a long way since the club formed last year. With over one hundred people involved, they are now able to give their support to more of the athletic teams. This was seen as the Bleacher Creatures supported the athletic teams of first and second semester.

Shelly Hayes stated, "The club is more organized this year and has a devoted group of leaders." This was seen as the Bleacher Creatures got involved with more than just cheering on the athletic teams. They could be seen at tailgate parties and selling "Fuzzy Grahms" on the quad during lunch.

The Bleacher Creatures made themselves more noticeable on campus as the entire club bought sweatshirts with the club's logo on it. This was to show their support for the teams and each other. Elisa Smith commented, "The games are so much more exciting and action packed when all of us squish together in one group and cheer on our teams!" The Bleacher Creatures was a club in which anyone could have joined for the purpose of having fun in cheering on the athletic teams throughout the year. "It was great being a Bleacher Creature!"

Seeking Perfect Harmony

By Chris Blackburn

The voice of Poway High students could be heard in K-1 during 5th period. This was the time that the choir met. Four years ago this might not have been the scene. The class was without a regular instructor or books to work with. Thanks to Mike Mosgrove, the choir director, the choir was back on its feet. In the past three years he has strengthened the choir and increased the overall size of the group.

Students found that choir was not an "easy A" class. What they did find was a class that was easy as long as they put the effort towards doing the best that they could. The choir class gave the opportunity for those students who enjoyed singing to improve their skill and most important it gave them the time to sing. "What we learned this year has helped me get started with what I like to do," stated Alyssa Karalekas. The course taught them how to read music and how to sing the proper way. "Singing deals with more than just opening your mouth and hoping what comes out sounds good. I've learned through this class what it takes to be a good singer," commented Laurie Elias. Choir proved to be a class that was fun and at the same time gave students the opportunity to enjoy and experience music.

New Traditions

By Lori Raber

"Where did you get your Iliad?" This was a familiar sound to hear every two weeks at Poway High. The first day of school the Iliad came out with a back-to-school issue. "This was the first time the Iliad ever came out the first day; we spent a lot of our own time doing it and it was worth it," stated Glen Tripp.

Stories about activities, sports and student opinions could always be found within the sixteen pages. The Iliad covered everything, not just one aspect of the school, according to Megan Murphy. The staff welcomed free-lance writing and letters from the student body. The goal was to make every paper better than the one before.

The staff this year was very self-contained. They did all their own lay-outs and organizing. "Each person has a job they are expected to do; they know they are depended on to do it," commented Vanessa Owen. The job definitely got done with a new Iliad to look forward to regularly.

"All of our efforts were worthwhile when the paper finally came out," replied several staff members. This year's staff had a goal to be number one in the county and top informer to PHS.

Cheerleading

Hey let's fire it up

By Chris Blackburn

"Our job is to get the crowds excited about our awesome athletic teams," stated Porche Melendez. That job has not been easy. This year's cheerleaders have put more than six hours a week in practicing. Because cheerleading is such a big responsibility, they have learned to organize their time in order to give support to all our teams.

The role of the cheerleader has expanded this year with new ideas and traditions. These new ideas could be seen in their appearance. The uniforms were the same design for the first time this year. The difference between the three groups' uniforms were the colors. The originality of the group shined as they entertained the lunch-time crowd and fired us up at the football games. They did more than just support our football teams this year. The cheerleaders could have been seen cheering on our water polo, volleyball, and basketball teams.

The cheerleaders put great effort in promoting the spirit of the Titans. Mika Phinney summed up her feelings about cheerleading when she replied, "If there is one thing that I will always remember about cheerleading, it would be the confidence and friendships that it gave me."

Key Club

Serving the Community

By Lori Raber

"It's the thing to do!" exclaimed Elisa Smith. This year's Key Club was the best PHS has ever had according to senior Jim Almand. The unique ideas from the officers helped make this club successful.

On a more day-to-day basis, the club held meetings to discuss basic agenda, fund raisers and major projects. "This year the meetings as well as the activities were more exciting," commented Kristin Yamasaki.

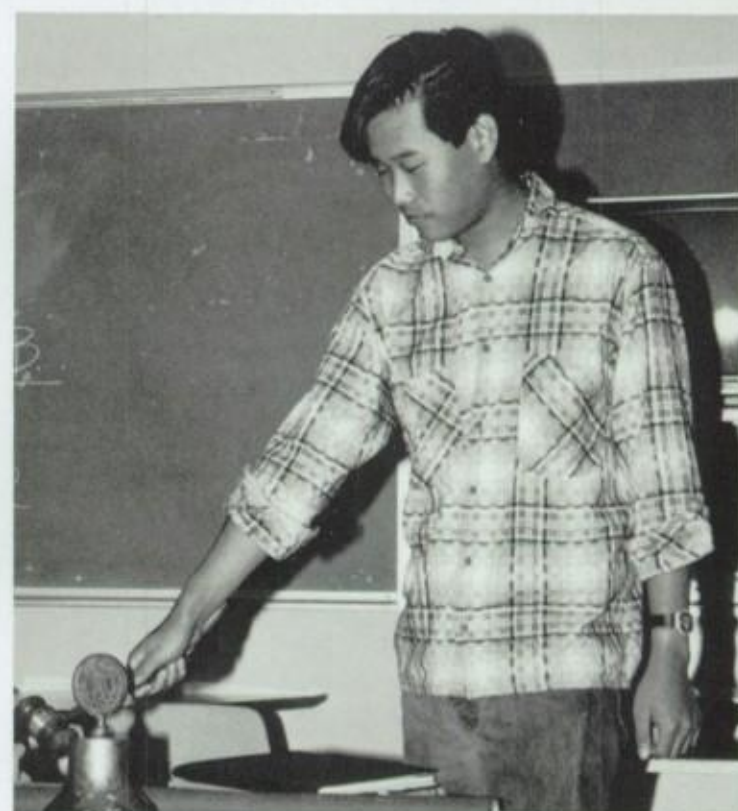

The club did more this year than just meetings. Every Wednesday the members had an opportunity to have breakfast with the Kiwanis Club at the Stoneridge Country Club. "The time we spent with those people meant a lot to them and to us," commented Steph Allen. These activities gave the club a chance to get to know their sponsors and learn about how to serve the community.

Pizza parties, car washes and conventions added to the list of fun activities this club was a part of. "Doing things for others was very rewarding," stated Darlene Baumans. This club met their goals together with hard work and a lot of fun.

Preparing for life

By Lori Raber

What does it take to be a future business leader? Just the desire to work and learn. This year's FBLA club had a definite plan of action to start the year off with. Each member received an information sheet, outlining everything they could expect to learn from the experience.

Some of the major points of the club were to teach leadership, participation, working with others and decision making. "With FBLA I felt like I was getting a head start," commented Dan Orner. A large goal of the club was to provide a better understanding of the American business enterprise system.

Fund raisers such as selling candy, helped the members finance activities. Touring businesses and industries gave them a clear view of business in action. Direct interaction with professionals also gave experience.

Future Business Leaders of America gave the students an opportunity to learn about our business system and have a great time while doing it.

Students Helping Students

By Chris Blackburn

Students Against Drunk Driving saw a major increase in campus participation over the year. Last year this club was held together by only a handful of students. This year the club was over 70 students strong. "It's nice to see such a great interest in SADD. This is the kind of club everyone should be involved with in some way," replied Michelle McClure.

There were many ways in which students could have been involved with SADD. This was due to the overall expansion of the program. Safe Rides was one way the program headed in a new direction. Every other Friday and Saturday, Poway High students could be seen at the AIRS building between 10 pm and 3 am. The students received calls from teenagers who needed a safe ride home. These students spent a lot of valuable time and gas.

SADD's major projects was to inform the student body about substance abuse and the dangers of drinking and driving. Some students even had the opportunity to council students in the middle schools.

Students Against Drunk Driving was the perfect club for those students who wanted to inform people of substance abuse. Thanks to dedication this all came true.

Meeting FFA

By Chris Blackburn

Many students did not realize that a club like Future Farmers of America existed at Poway High School. The truth was that Future Farmers of America was one of the oldest clubs on campus. The actual class was located far off from the hustle and bustle of everyday campus life. The agriculture area of our school was one of the most separate and secluded places.

"Future Farmers of America has grown immensely in the past four years due to the greater interest in animals and plants," commented President Ricky Kennedy. Most students did not realize that there are active FFA clubs in all 50 states and Puerto Rico.

The students in this program learned personal leadership and development which was best achieved through the outstanding chapter of FFA here at Poway High.

"We have proved ourselves to be a club that does positive activities," stated President Eric O'Connor. This attitude could be seen throughout the entire year as the Junior Civitan participated in a variety of community services. One of the major projects it was involved with was helping put on the Special Olympics in Westwood. The students helped organize the event and cheered on its participants in events such as modified track and field.

The club's major fundraiser came in the form of gourmet suckers. Students found it hard to pass up these giant lollipops. The money received from this fundraiser went to buy a van to help transport those who were physically handicapped to and from the Special Olympics.

Poway High could be proud of the outstanding work that its Jr Civitan was engaged with in helping the community.

A Warm Welcome

By Lori Raber

"Welcome to America!" The AFS club did more than just welcoming foreign exchange students. "The AFS club provided a place where the students could go if they ever needed help or a friend who understood what they were going through," commented Sara Massengill. The club sponsored Christmas and other holiday parties as well as custom related activities. They did a number of small trips around the local area to help give the students a taste of America. AFS gave American students the chance to experience other cultures in an indirect way. Each student was required to give an oral presentation about his country and its customs. This gave people in the club a better understanding of the individual and his/her country. "It was party, party and more party along with a great experience," commented an enthusiastic member. You did not necessarily have to have plans to be an exchange student to join AFS; anyone could join. "There are so many different walks of life here at PHS; it is a perfect place for someone to see variety," stated Noel Mellon ## Strike!!

by Lori Raber

Another Saturday morning rolled around and the bowling club was up and ready to go for a serious competition. "I would really like to see bowling become a letter sport; we put a lot of time in and we represent Poway High School," commented President Dennis Poon. The bowling club had a better constant turnout than ever before. "This year we finally beat our toughest competition, (Mt. Carmel)," replied a serious member. The main goals of these club members were to improve their own technique and to help improve the overall club. The bowling club added to the unique variety of clubs available to the students at Poway High. This club was more than a few friends getting together to bowl a few frames on a Saturday morning. Helping each other and trying to influence others to join was a main objective of the club this year. If you are strolling by Carriage Lanes, drop in and see the Bowling Club.

Problems?

by Lori Raber

From foundations to calculus BC, the Math Club was made up of people from all levels of math at Poway High School. "This was a great club for those who were interested in learning material other than what was offered in their classrooms, no matter what level," stated John Mayo. This club met at lunch to discuss different math problems and upcoming math competitions. These contests were not only open to the club but to the entire student body. "This club contributed to my high school participation and prepared me for my future career," stated James Sze. This year the Math Club grew in size from the years past.

All of Mr. Weiss' energy plus a true desire to learn helped make this club a success. They can only hope for the club to grow in the future.

Keywannettes

Serving our Community

By Chris Blackburn

"A larger variety of people in our club have been participating in the activities we do," stated Stacy Harris. This was due to the excellent leadership the Keywannettes enjoyed this year. The club was involved in a wide range of activities from fundraisers to the elderly Bingo games.

One of the first fund raisers the Keywannettes had this year was their annual pizza sale. It was as much of a success as in previous years. The money raised from the sale was donated to the "Make a Wish Foundation". Their second major fund raiser was their candy bar sale. The money made sent the club to the annual Keywannettes Convention in Fresno. This convention was a major event for the club. Over 500 girls from California, Nevada, and Hawaii attended. During their stay, they learned about new projects and fund raisers in the making. The highlight was the election of the new officers to serve all the Keywannette Clubs in the district. Poway High's own Julie Downing was elected District Secretary for the three states. She stated, "It's a lot of work, but I'm glad to be in a club that does the things we do."

Speaking to Victory

By Chris Blackburn

For most people getting in front of a group and speaking is a frightening thought. Poways own Speech and Debate club had no problem with this. The club met every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursdays to prepare for the variety of tournaments they encountered this year.

The club competed in two different groups. The first group, known as the "A" team, competed at the varsity level. The second group, known as the "B" team, was for those students who have never competed in a tournament before. The students could do any of six different types of speeches. The types ranged from impromptu to dramatic interpretation.

Speech and Debate got involved with the fund raiser scene this year. The club sold mistletoe bunches on the quad before Christmas vacation. "The money that we earn is going to help pay the costs for the tournaments," replied Jennifer Stampfli.

The club was not all work and no play. Andrea Tracy stated, "I look at the social aspects and try to have a good time."

Surf

Hang Ten

by Lori Raber

"Surf's Up" at Poway High this year with the newly re-established Surf Club. "The club was brought back to life this year with all the new members," commented Chip Forkenbrock. Some of the activities that were scheduled this past year were tournaments against other schools and trips to Mexico. The club met approximately once or twice a month to discuss upcoming contests and beach trips. It was hard for our Surf Club to compete frequently due to the fact that many of the local high schools did not have active surf clubs. The club increased greatly and ended up with over thirty members. "Whether we were competing or just surfing for fun, we had a great time," commented Jim Jones. The club showed definite improvement from the past years.

Now one of Poway's most successful clubs, the Surf Club went on to make its new debut.

Skin Diving

SPLASH!

by Lori Raber

This year's Skin Diving Club started in the Poway High swimming pool. "We all needed to learn how to use the equipment so we practiced in the pool," explained Bridget Gast. Mrs. Behrhorst taught basic procedures of diving and safety precautions. "I joined this club to give me hands-on experience that will benefit my career in the future; I also made a lot of friends," commented Matt Gueren. This club had several dives at places such as Misson Beach and La Jolla. "It was an educational way to spend a Saturday, and I learned so much," stated Kristin McCarthy. Kids interested in learning about the ocean and having a great time really have kept this club alive.

This club has become an active part of Poway High School and a great off-campus hobby.

Interact

Being There

by Lori Raber

Students helping the community was a popular interest at Poway High. The Interact club was another newly established club that emerged on our campus this year. Student initiated, this club was a service club that had an amazing turnout of members. The club came in seventh place against a large number of local schools in a food drive for the poor and homeless. "We felt great helping others and we learned a lot about ourselves in the process," stated Greg Stampfli. "It's neat to know that students are interested in the needs of others in our world; they are very aware of problems that need to be solved," commented Mr. David. With over fifty active members, the Interact Club had a variety of people to work with and learn from. "We are hoping to grow even more in future years, but now we are happy to have helped bring about a great club."

Writers Anonymous

Sharing

by Lori Raber

"What do you think of this?" was a common remark heard at Writers Anonymous meetings. This was a brand new club started on campus this year by Tami Marko. The club was established to give students at our school a chance to write and get a creative response from their peers. "We could write about anything and get positive comments and constructive criticism about our writing," commented Rich Haggerty. It was a relaxed academic club which really promoted self-expression and creativity. "It was a great feeling to have people who wanted to offer comments about what you wrote — people that really cared about writing," mentioned Jennifer Stampfli. Writers Anonymous was an example of a successful student-initiated club. "We learned a lot about expression and each other."

If We Believe

by Lori Raber

"Together we can't fail if we believe": This year's Emerald Brigade was successful as well as unique. Their field show included Latin chanting, a fluorescent maypole, a flute quartet and a piccolo/tympany duet. These were aspects of a show that had never been seen before. "This year I felt our show was artistic and exciting; it was great to have a totally unique show that stood out," commented Megan Murphy. The Emerald Brigade was led by Drum Majors Chris Blackburn and Hector Valenzuela. "We put in an average of twenty hours a week of practice and competition time," replied Laurie Elias. "It was well worth it when we won and improved each week," she concluded. The Emerald Brigade was made up of the band, color guard and the percussion section. "We are all a team, and we celebrate each other's victory as well as the overall award, even if it is just knowing that we are improving," commented Michelle McClure.

As a climax, this year the band went to the Fiesta Bowl representing Poway as one of the top-ten bands in the nation.

Vive La France

By Jennifer Stampfli

"Finally there's a club on campus for the purpose of learning through fun activities," explained Vice President Jennifer Gannon. Just started this year, the French Club formed a basis for those interested in the language to get together and experience some of the country's culture. President Nazi Khadem started the club "To get together with others interested in French culture; it was like bringing France to Poway." Although most members had taken French as a class, speaking the language wasn't a requirement. Nazi recruited Mme. Browning as an advisor and Mme. Alfred, who previously lived in France, came in to help plan activities and explain French tradition. The club traveled to the La Jolla Cove to see French movies subtitled in English and even prepared an entire French meal together. Since almost all members were Seniors, Nazi hoped that "the few underclassmen involved were interested enough to carry on next year." Stacy Harris, the treasurer, added, "This year laid the ground for what will come in the future." Claire Nelson, the secretary, and Gretchen Beck both felt the French Club "widened their horizons and taught them about life outside the U.S."

Supporting Each Other

By Lori Raber

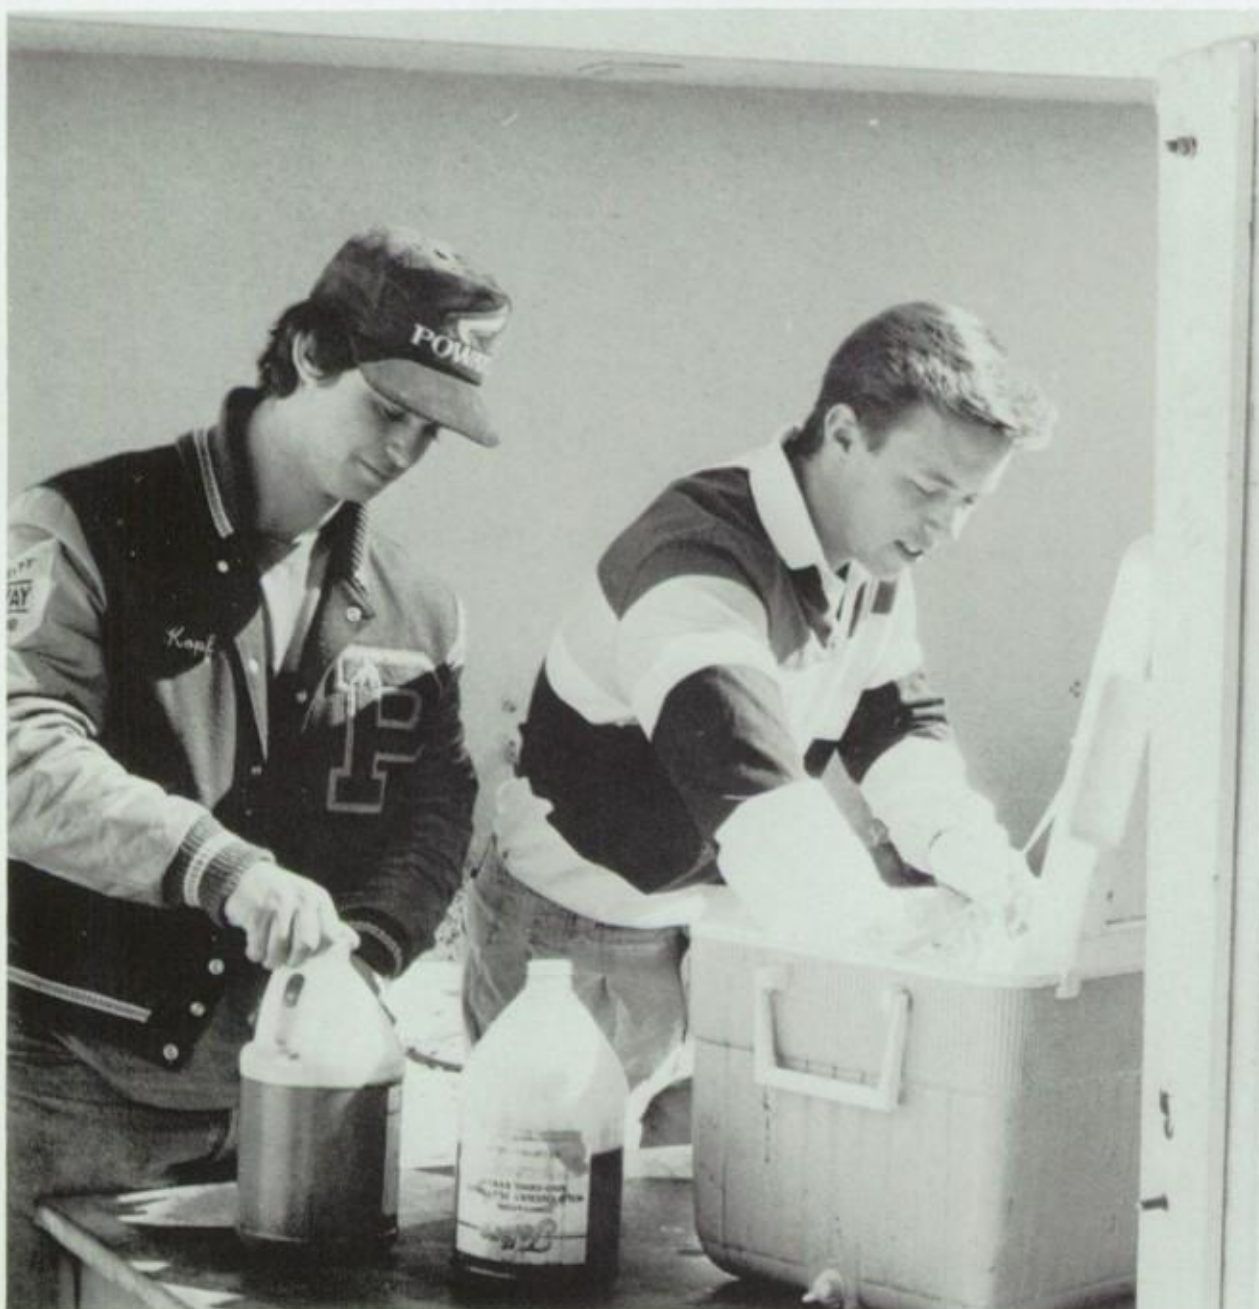

Helping each other and friendship were what this year's Varsity Club was all about. Each sport helped support the others by earning money for everyone. They sold popcorn and sno-cones to help raise money. When asked what the purpose of the club was, John Stephens replied, "To unite all the sports together." The meetings informed the members about when events were happening and what events were upcoming. They also discussed the outcome of various competitions.

"This club helped provide school pride and pride out on the field or wherever the teams competed," stated Dustin Seale. Each member knew that there were students who cared and were out there rooting for them at every game.

An infamous activity of this club was their top-secret initiation technique. You will have to become a member to find that one out.

Cradle It Baby

By Chris Blackburn

Lacrosse, the newest sport to reach Poway high school, finished its third season this year under coaches Pete Larrabee and Bob Champion. The team grew in number to forty dedicated players. Lacrosse combines the strategy of basketball, physical contact of football and endurance of soccer. Returning player Sean DePriest commented, "Lacrosse is unlike any other sport I've participated in. I joined because it was something new and different and not like most high school sports." One of this year's few female players, Cathy Elmore, explained, "I watched the game last year and every one seemed to have a great time. I love it because it's such a challenge." Larrabee added, "Despite the skills required, you can pick the basics up in about three weeks." This year Poway competed against local teams plus those from other states. Matt Bailey hoped "that lacrosse becomes a CIF sport."

Guardian Angels

By Chris Blackburn

One of the wrestling team's biggest supporters were the grappelettes. This group of girls put in a lot of time and hard work this year in helping the wrestling team. The main purpose of the club use to be cheering on the wrestlers, but that has all changed. The club has expanded its responsibility to the wrestlers. The main one was keeping score, stats, and keeping time. They also gave flowers to the wrestlers at school before a meet. Each girl was given a couple of wrestlers and she was to become their guardian angel. This meant that they would give gifts to their wrestlers before a meet. The grappelettes were also the spirit of the team. You could always see them at the meet cheering on the wrestling team. Megan Callaway expressed her feeling about the club when she stated, "10 guys to each girl!"

Art

Art's Music

By Chris Blackburn

A few times a year the halls are full of the outstanding work of Poway High's art students. During this time the student body was welcomed to look at some of the art work that other students produced. For many people art is a way of self expression and putting emotion on a canvas. "Painting is like singing. You have to make the art work you're doing sing. One piece that I did this year took me six weeks to complete. Now it's finished and it is a symphony," stated three-year art student Chris Schmidt.

Art deals with more than just slapping some paint on a canvas and calling it a "masterpiece". Mrs. Margary Zacarias, the class instructor, felt that artists are born with the gene that makes a good artist. She stated, "You are either born with the ability or you just don't have it, but when students have the ability they are outstanding." Poway High's artist brought their originality to the campus.

Club Scholar

By Chris Blackburn

The California Scholarship Federation is a club that sets academic qualifications for its members. In order to qualify for this club students must have a grade point average of 3.5 or better. Anyone receiving a grade lower than a C is unable to be a member. This year's CSF only met a few times throughout the year. The main purpose of the club is to inform these students about the variety of scholarships. In November, the club sold Turkey Grams to help raise money for scholarships to be given to deserving members of the club. Outstanding member, Stephanie Arns, stated, "Besides CSF being a source for information on scholarships, the people in this group really care about their future and that's what makes them special." CSF helps students who have high goals find the financial aid they need to go to the college of their choice. This organization has proved to be a great help to dedicated and hard-working students.

Top Honors

By Chris Blackburn

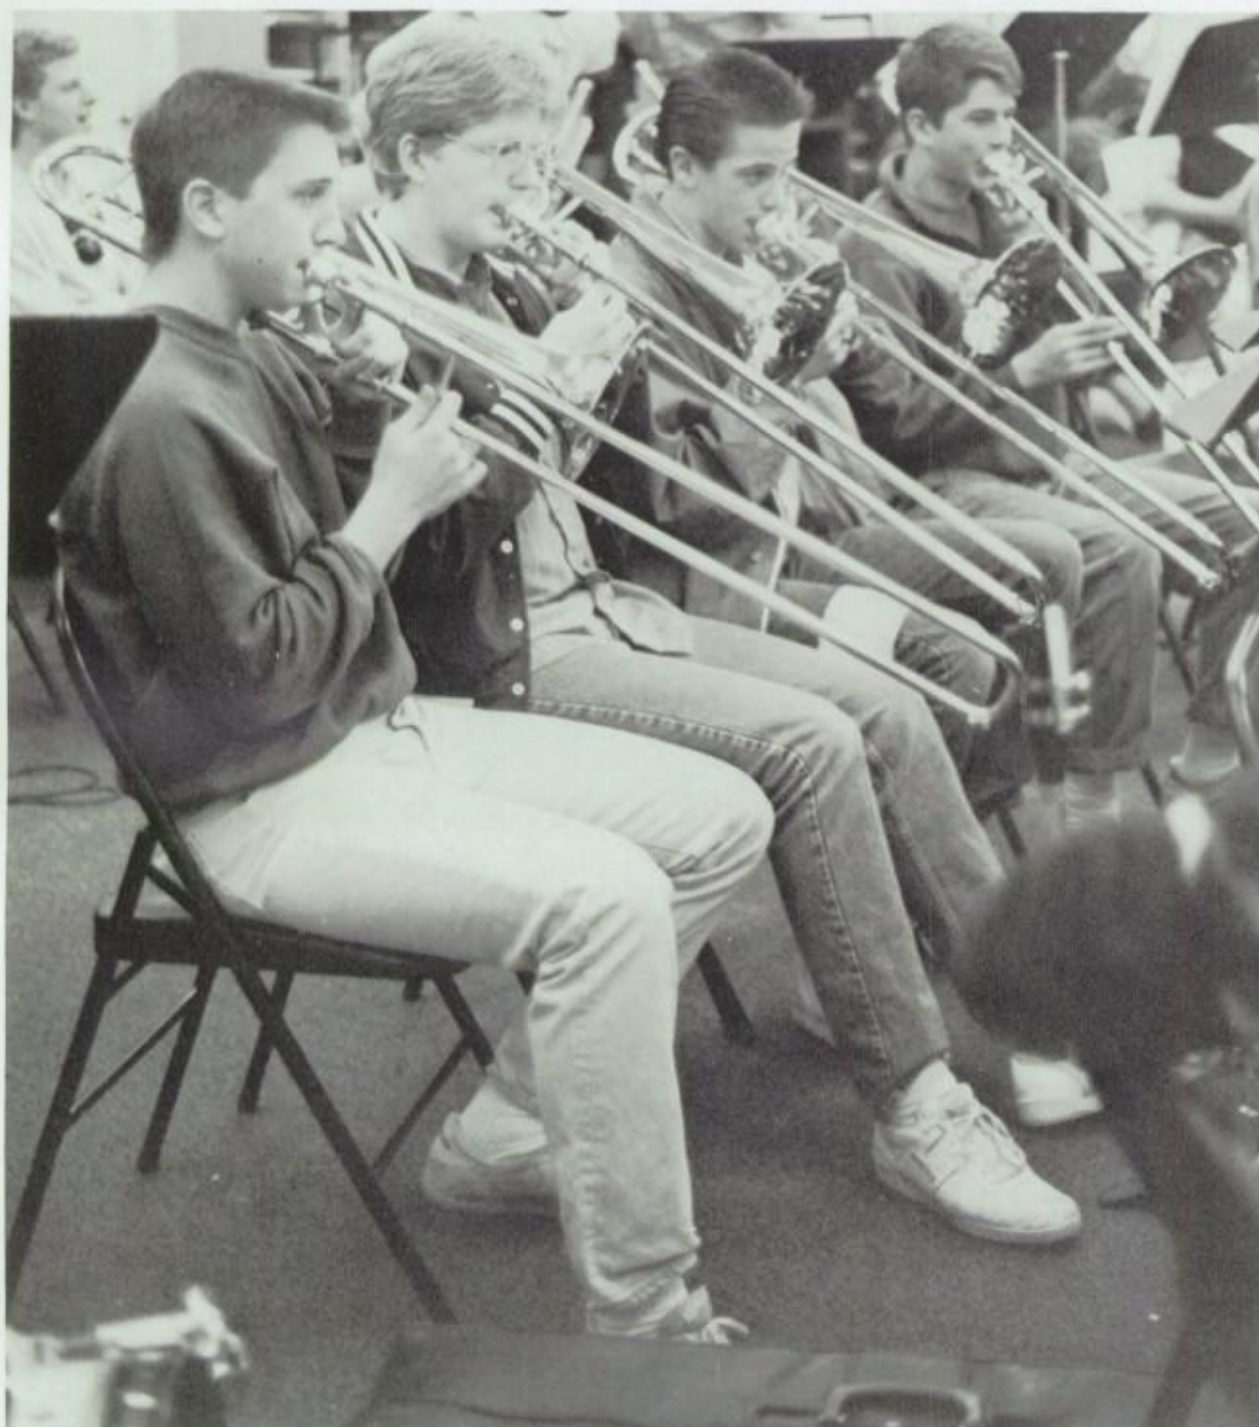

The National Honor Society is a unique club for those students who strive for academic excellence. Each member is required to have a cumulative grade point average of at least a 3.7, and have participated in extracurricular activities. Only Seniors and Juniors who met these requirements were able to participate in this distinguished organization. Many members of NHS were able to submit their names and accomplishments to "Who's Who Among American High School Students", a book which contains a list of outstanding students from across the nation. Senior member, Helen McClain commented with enthusiasm, "I'm proud to be a member in a club that has a reputation for such high standards." Besides the prestige of belonging to NHS, the club also gave members the chance to share their future plans with others that also had extremely high goals. To several prominent Poway students, the National Honor Society gave them the recognition that they deserved.

All That Jazz

by Chris Blackburn

Poway's jazz band is one of the hottest in Southern California. Most students have seen this group perform as a pep band during home basketball games. Jeff Johnston looked forward to these games because "I get to show off my talents as a saxophone player." Almost all brass instruments can be part of a jazz band, including trumpets, saxophones, and trombones. In addition, Poway's jazz band has incorporated the sounds of drums, electric guitars, and synthesizers. The jazz band met every Wednesday and Thursday as a seventh period class. Fitz Pitchford remarked, "It takes up a fair amount of time but the results make it worth it. Band director Mike Mosgrove has helped the jazz band achieve high honors in the past years. Every year they attend a music festival called "Music Olympics" in Los Angeles. Bands from across the country come to compete for the top awards. "One of the reasons I joined jazz is because I love the music style and having one person a part makes me feel important," stated Matt Powers. Jazz can be proud of its achievements this year.

Learning With Each Other

By Lori Raber

"Theater and drama really helps give students a better understanding of people through acting out their characters," commented Cheryl Roccoforte. The Theater Guild was made up of all drama students including actors in the school plays. This group practiced scenes and played a variety of acting games. These games helped to break the ice for the less-outgoing members and prepared them for future plays. "In drama class you get to know how people really are through all the different scenes, each individual has a style," commented Bill Stoddard.

The group went to Pasadena to perform and improve their acting. They attended workshops with different objectives to add variety and to give them a chance to meet students from other schools. "We learned from students as well as the instructors." They also had a chance to pick up new ideas for future practice. This club was open to any student who shows an active interest in the theater.

Talking it over

By Chris Blackburn

This year's Model United Nation Club brought together students who were both interested in social science and international relationships. The club met as a class every Wednesday and Thursday during 7th period. Mr. Goff, the class instructor, discussed the variety of different cultures and political beliefs throughout the world. Matt Bouman stated, "It's great to know about countries and learn to respect their views. This club gives you the chance to put yourself in other people's shoes."

The club had to stay on top of all items involved in the world. The hot topics this year were the problems in Central America and the Iran-Iraq war. To keep on top the club members would continuously drill themselves on the various news topics in the world. The club took a trip to Riverside this year for a United Nation mock conference. The students went through actual United Nation simulations which involved entire countries. Countries were represented by other Model UN clubs from various chapters in the national organization. Nikki Brauer stated, "The club gave us a chance to discuss world problems and how to best solve them."

Starting Out

By Chris Blackburn

"First position the body in a sculling position, then slowly throw the legs and arms at the same time, up and let yourself sink, then you have an oyster," was a common explanation of a Synchronized Swimming stunt stated by coach Wendy Jeffries. Every Friday after school Poways' own synchronized swimming team could be seen practicing in the pool. Wendy Jeffries, the team's coach, is a professional coach who showed the girls the proper way they should do their routines in the water. The only requirements were that you had to be a strong swimmer and be accurate with music. In the pool the girls would do various routines "When we do our routines the swimmers have to be in 'sync' with each other and at the same time keep the beat of the music in the back of your head," stated club member Julie Schlect. The club's members hope that next year's club will be larger and stronger.

Mu Alpha Theta joined the ranks of new clubs this year. The club was formed as an extension of the Math and Computer Club. The major requirements for the club were that its members had to take two math tests over the course of the year. The tests involved questions that tested the logical thinking of the participants. The first math test was the UCSB math competition. "It's exciting to see how your math skills compare on a national level, and Mu Alpha Theta was the club that helped to inform me about the tests," stated club member Stephanie Arns. It's not surprising to know that Poway High students did excellent in these competitions. Mr. Norman Weiss, the club's advisor, helped to inform the members on upcoming contest and helped prepare them on those contests. Mu Alpha Theta may have been new this year but the participation of its members will have allowed this club to stay around awhile. It's proved to be fun and at the same time challenging.

Getting Recognized

By Lori Raber

"Quick, Duck!" exclaimed Matt Powers as an out-of-control rifle flew across the court. This year's Winterguard practiced hard with extremely challenging routines. Winterguard was an extension of the first semester color guard with a completely different style. Instead of performing with the band on the football field, the guard competed on inside basketball courts to recorded music. "Most people don't even know what Winterguard is mainly because there are no home competitions," stated Michelle McClure.

This year the guard made an attempt to become better known by performing at assemblies on different occasions.

Poway took out two teams, one with strictly flags and one with flags and rifles. "We had to eliminate our rifle line first semester but we are hoping to carry on the line from second semester through next year," commented Pam Haehl.

Hitting the slopes

By Lori Raber

Whether you went for the advanced slopes or you chose to snow-plow-it on the bunny runs, this year's Ski Club made everyone feel welcome. The club had meetings to inform the members about the trip and to give everyone a chance to get to know each other. "The bus ride was an incredible twenty-four hour experience, by the end of the trip we were bouncing off the walls and we had a great time," stated Tony James. The bus ride was only the beginning. The hotel parties and the various dinner expeditions added to the raging time. Most people who join end up staying in the club for their entire high school career. "I guess people just get addicted after they find out how much fun it really is."

The Ski Club had grown tremendously over the past few years. The skiers did a great job of promoting their favorite school activity away from school. This club was a popular and fun way to have a busy vacation and meet new people.

Back To Basic Writing

Writing seems to be spreading across the campus like a forest fire. "Clear writing is the essence of clear thinking," stated Mrs. Ghafur. This enables people to think clearly about anything in life that can be associated with writing. Many of the teachers at Poway High School have been encouraging writing in every subject matter, even in areas where one may think writing has nothing to do with a particular subject, it does. For instance, Mr. Mello and Mrs. Wagner include writing into their classes, by asking the students to write a journal on given daily topics. "Writing throughout classes would broaden our society," stated Dee Dee Holden.

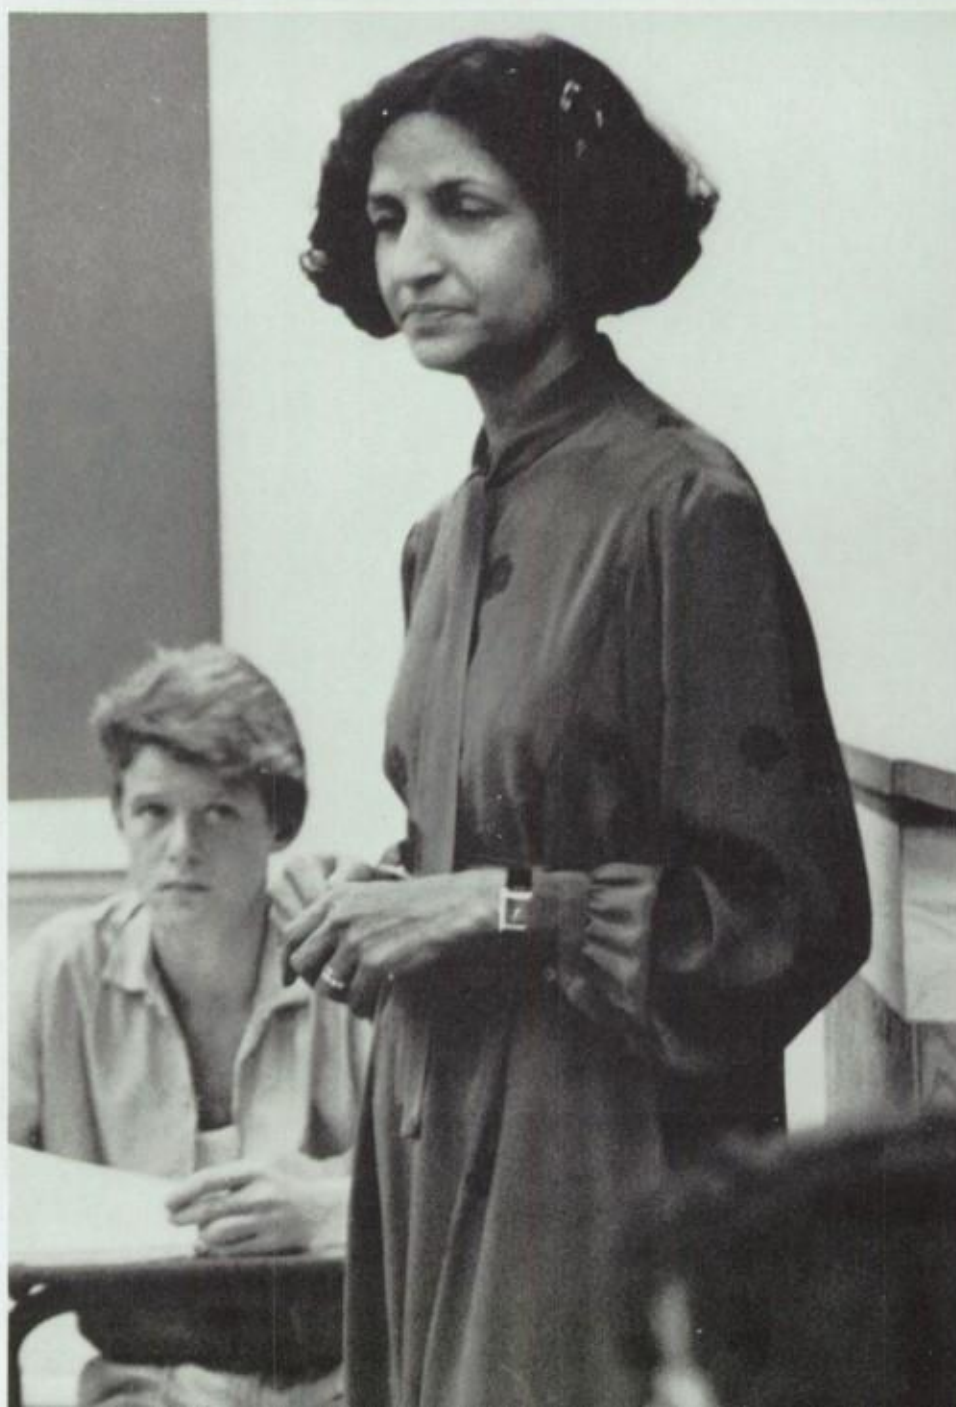

Writing was also promoted in foreign language classes. Mr. Easter, a Spanish teacher, stated, "Even though one might think Spanish is mainly an oral class, we have devoted a lot of time to writing. I require a student to listen to a tape and then write a composition relating to the subject."

The importance of writing could also be seen through the teachers. For the first time in history a meeting off campus, for two days, a writing workshop, was attended by the English teachers of Poway High School. The idea of the workshop was to grow as instructors of writing, and to develop a scene of unity.

A new club, as well emphasized writing as a whole. "Writers Anonymous," which met every other Monday, enabled the students to express their feelings and emotions," stated Tami Marko. The students during the meetings, would share their particular ideas with other club members who would state their opinions and give input toward their writing.

Writing was encouraged in many different subject areas, as well as through new writing activities. As Jon Andrews stated, "Writing has benefitted me in being able to express my ideas clearly, it also has let me state my emotions on paper, as well as enabled me to express my innermost opinions."

Counselors Aid Students

by Stephanie Allen

"When can I talk to my counselor? When do I take the SAT?"

Common questions such as these could be heard throughout the counseling office. "We try to help the students look into the future and help them through the tenth and eleventh grade," explained Counselor Dave Boulware.

The counselors also dealt with career planning. With the ever-changing college requirements, the counselors had to keep their information upbeat. "I find the counselors help you plan ahead, so you are prepared for the outside world. They have provided me with a lot of information," stated Jeff Haines.

Zoltan Petro summed it up by saying, "The counselors helped play an important role in the student's education. The counselors also deal well with the students. Though they have a lot of work, they still manage to have time for individual help."

Whatever questions the students had, they were answered by the counselors. They have assisted the students in many ways.

An Appreciation Of Others

By Gretchen Beck

"Keeping the attendance sheets rolling always keeps me busy," stated Tommie Mehrrens. Not only does the office staff have to keep track of the attendance, but one can always find them working on unending piles of papers that need to be typed and filed. Students as well seem to take up a lot of their time. Many times they help students prepare scholarship applications, arrange testing dates and they even take care of many students basic problems. "Handling applications for SAT testing and scholarships keeps me busy," stated our counseling secretary Mrs. Streidel.

Under all of this work one can find a true dedication to students by the office staff. "If it weren't for the people, I wouldn't be busy and these same people are the reason I enjoy my work," stated our athletics secretary Mrs. Kaylor. Students seem to feel the same way toward the office staff. "Whenever problems arise, the office staff is always close at hand for any help required," stated Sunny Brockmoller. # Skills For Life

By Stephanie Allen

The sound of keys being hit, as well as a voice of a teacher explaining an accounting technique could be heard through the halls. "Business courses help students prepare for college prerequisite or for the vocational oriented student," stated Sandra Childers.

With this in mind, many students enrolled in the business classes. Accounting, typing and computer programming courses, were offered to the students. "Accounting will help me later in life if I decide to major in the business field," commented Kristen Finneran.

Typing as well benefited the students, toward their futures. "Typing will help get a secretarial job as well as help me with the outside world," stated Dawn Boughter. Typing has helped people to the other extreme. It benefits both hand and eye coordination. "Typing has helped my finger coordination," exclaimed Danny Miller.

Many students will find the skills that they obtained in the business courses will be beneficial to them in the future.

Becoming Self-Sufficient

By Gretchen Beck

"It's more than knowing a domestic trade; it's learning to be self-sufficient," stated Sandy Berndsen. This definitely falls into the classes of Consumer Education. Of course the students learn about their particular subject, but more importantly they learn how to manage on their own. "It's not a cruise class, it prepares you for life," stated Alicia Brew. This main goal could be learned in all the classes. Such as: Single Survival, Interior Design, Clothing, and Cooking. A new class that was added this year was Fashion Merchandising in which students were able to experience working in various types of jobs at North County Fair Shopping Center. This enabled them many learning opportunities in the fashion industry. Throughout all of these classes a feeling of accomplishment is learned in each class, as well as the major goal of being self-sufficient.

New Ideas Promote Writing

By Stephanie Allen

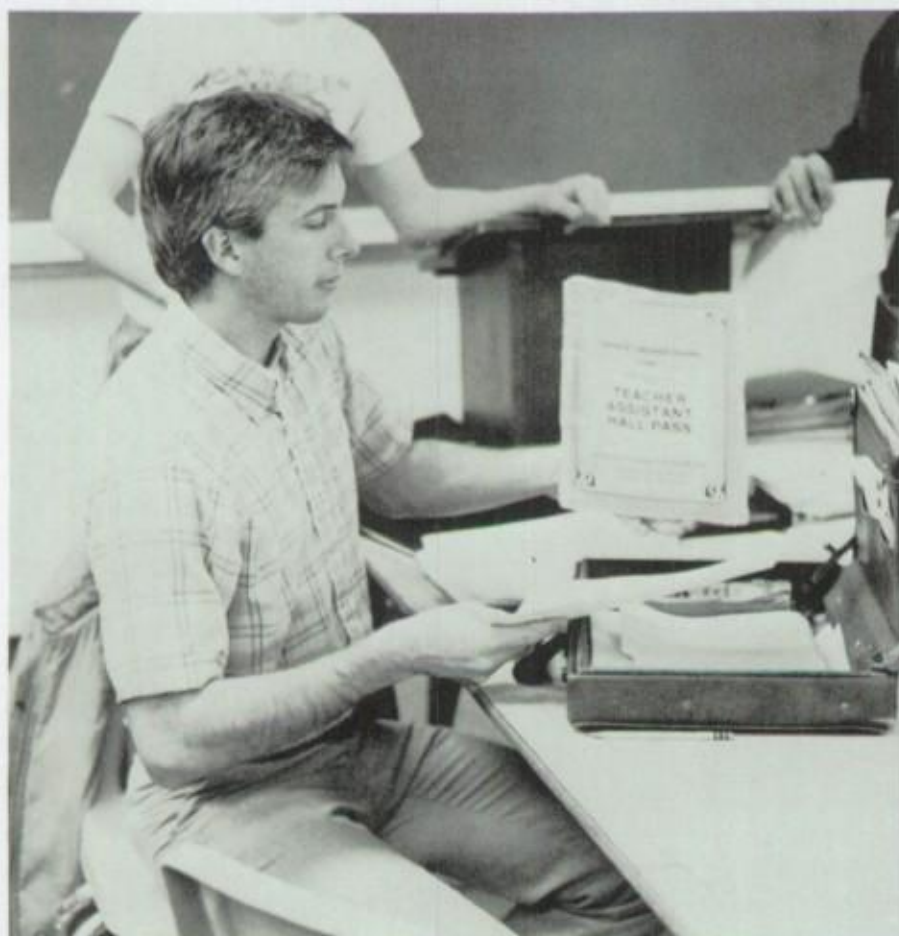

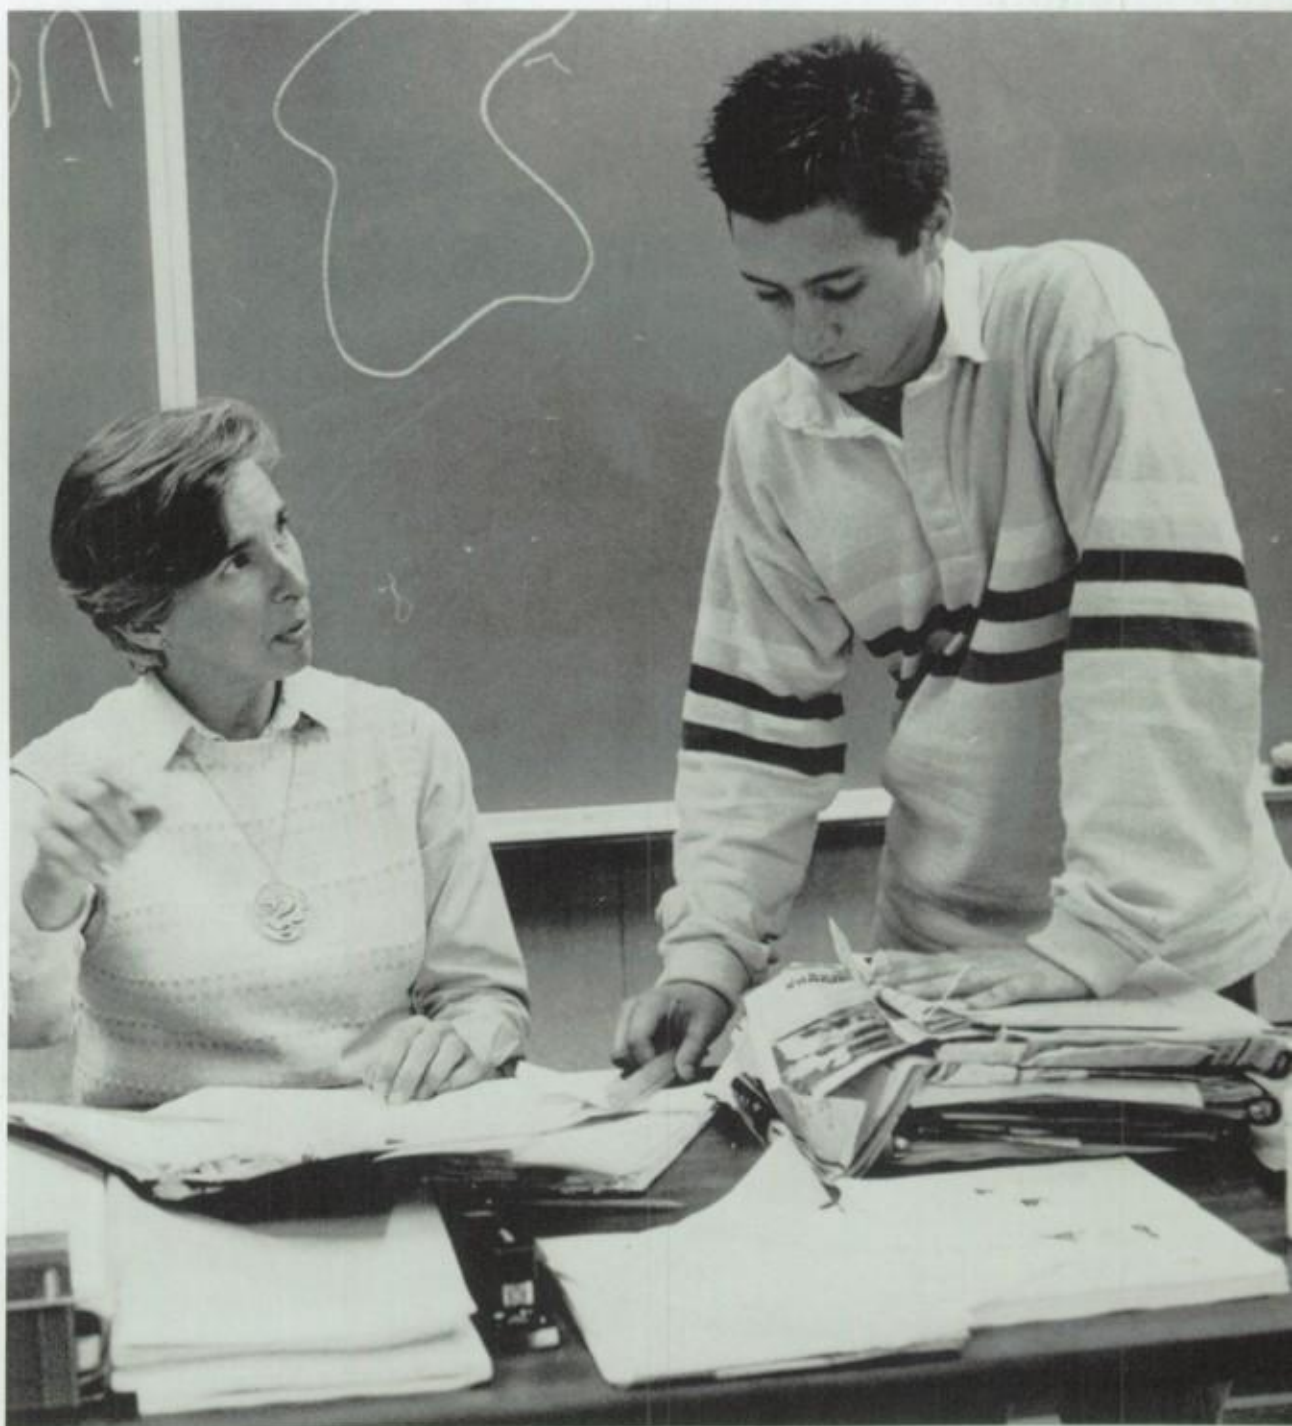

With new ideas, and teachers expanding their knowledge, the English Department finished a productive year.

The teachers tried to teach their students to respond to a piece of writing or a book. "I try to stimulate an interest by creating as many different activities as are possible. My classes do guided readings, create projects that are visual and or written based on readings, respond personally to selections of their own choice and finally create and teach a book to each other," said Mrs. Dabbs.

Also, some English teachers were able to create a writing atmosphere with the help of speakers coming to their classroom. Guy Green, an Oscar-winning cinematographer for "Great Expectations" talked to students in Mr. Kunert's Lit and Film class. Mr. Kunert believed, "This gives students an opportunity to talk to interesting people they never get to know under normal circumstances."

Wendy Winkelman concluded, "The English Department has given me the opportunity to research new topics and express myself creatively"

Creating Art

By Gretchen Beck

"Any art class, unlike other classes, allows students to be completely creative," stated Mr. Carr. This creativity ranged anywhere from jewelry making to crafts classes. In the ceramics classes, for example, many projects reflected a great deal of creativeness. One particular project allowed the students to see the difference between glaze and glass finishes. These both can be used when putting the final touches on a pottery project. "Pottery allows me to be creative with my hands, and thus through this I not only enjoy the art, but I've learned much too," stated Andy Cortez. Some basic assignments that were found in many drawing and painting classes, were pencil sketches, water colors, tempra painting, and even a few chose to use oil paint. Many of the pictures that were made, were taken originally from pictures in magazines. One could find just about any subject matter being worked on in Mrs. Zacarias class. "Using magazines, allows students to exercise their selectivity and to reveal their point of view." And thus through all the art classes a scene of creativeness could be found. Jay Hyde expressed himself in much of the same way. "Art has enabled me to be creative while doing something I enjoy."

Learning Job Skills

By Stephanie Allen

"Industrial Art's main goal is to help promote students to entry level job skills. The classes are also a place where students can apply other areas, such as math and science," stated Mr. Roybal.

The idea of promoting job skills was seen throughout the Industrial Art classes. Courses such as Auto, Drafting and metal shop, taught students the basic requirement of each class.

In beginning Auto, the class ranged from topics of Consumer Education to car maintenance. "The students were taught the basics of Consumer Education so they could apply the knowledge in the future. Each student also learned mechanic skills, by working on their own car," commented Mr. Gardner.

Whereas in drafting, students learned the techniques involved in drawing a floor plan for a house. This floor plan was one of the many requirements for the students. Drafting also reinforced the hand and eye coordination of Geometry.

Woodshop and metalshop promoted skills for a future in the job market. Students learned to weld and use the machinery. "Welding assists me because it teaches me things I can use later in life" declared Lawrence Buck.

The Industrial Art Department aided students in learning the skills involved in each class. These basic oriented skills will help the student place high in the job market.

Understanding Other Cultures

By Gretchen Beck

"Learning another person's language helps us to have more empathy with other cultures resulting in a better understanding of those in our world and a better world," stated Madame Guild. Any language enables students to be able to communicate in a foreign language. This becomes very helpful to many students who plan to travel, study, and even live in another country. "I took a language because, it will enable me to communicate in foreign countries, as I plan to travel abroad," stated Nicole Burwell. To ensure the students, that by taking a foreign language, they will be able to communicate in a foreign land, many teachers try to speak mostly in the particular language that they are teaching. This allows the students to learn and think in their particular language, instead of constantly translating from English to their language in their minds. "This way of thinking has helped us to think in our language, by using it in the classroom," stated the German 7-8 students. They as well felt that, "learning German has broadened our knowledge and culturally expanded the aura of our education."

Teaching A Quality Lifestyle

By Stephanie Allen

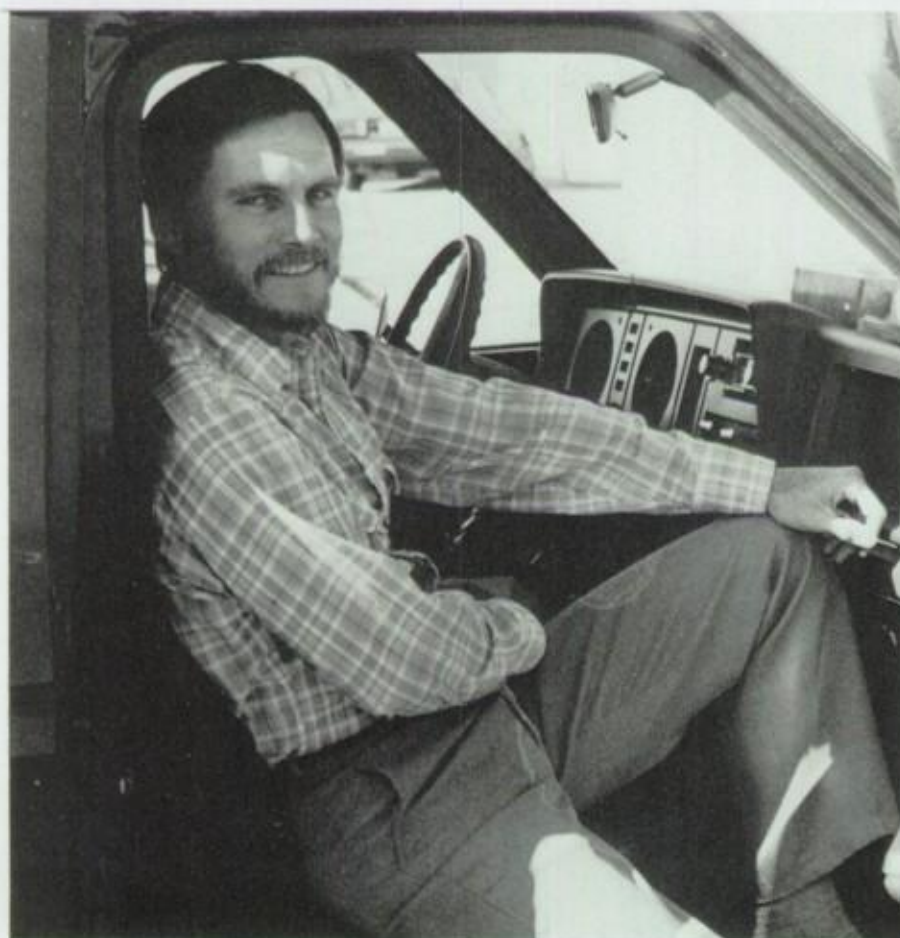

"I try to teach the students to learn to maintain a quality lifestyle," stated health instructor Mr. Frederick.

Using Mr. Frederick's example, the health teachers taught a variety of topics that included life-saving techniques, nutrition, family life and substance abuse. Among lectures and notes, the students learned how to live a healthy life. Many films enabled the students to see a visual presentation of the topics that were discussed. One important aspect of Health Education was learning C.P.R. The students practiced on dummies in learning the life skill. "In case someone gets into an accident, I can use CPR to help them," commented Karmyn Clark.

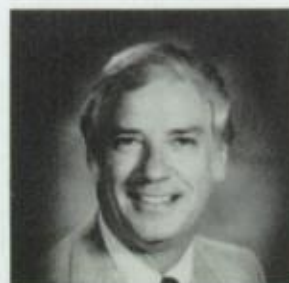

Among the changes in Health Education, were Drivers Education was offered only seventh period and not during the normal class periods. This year's ninth graders made up the majority of the classes, with a few tenth graders. Next year, it will be only a freshman class.

Remaining Physically Fit

By Gretchen Beck

The physical education teachers' major emphasis this year was motivating the students to exercise, and to be physically fit now and in their futures. "It's like anything in the pie of life, which consists of four parts-mental, social, spiritual, and physical; you must enjoy everything you do, and what you enjoy hopefully will benefit you. Just as any exercise will be an advantage to your body's well being," stated Ms. Cooper. Students seemed to feel the same. Christie Allen replied, "P.E. offers a wide variety of sports which I hope I will enjoy as much and be actively involved in when I'm older."

Many courses were offered to the students which incorporated these same ideas. Sophomores and upperclassmen could pick classes anywhere from racquetball to weight lifting. The Freshmen experienced a little bit of everything. A few requirements for them were team, individual, and strength type sports. Through all of the P.E. classes, a desire to become physically fit was encouraged. Cindy Dudgeon stated, "P.E. has taught me good habits of physical fitness that will benefit my health habits for the rest of my life."

Students Learn From History

By Stephanie Allen

Every student at Poway High School has taken a course from the Social Science Department. Civics, U.S. History and World History were a few of the classes required for graduation. Because of this, many students acquired new knowledge dealing with current events and information relating to our country's history. Mrs. Fulwiler replied, "One major objective of this course is to make the students aware of the freedoms that we enjoy in a democracy and that people in the past have made possible for us to enjoy our freedoms."

Also, the Political Faire put on by the Social Science Department enabled the students to learn more about government issues, facing the United States. "The faire gave me a chance to pick up interesting pamphlets on subjects that are important to the world," stated Diana Guerrero.

Jenny Graff concluded, "I've learned a lot through my Social Science classes, it taught me information about the United States."

Facing The Future

By Gretchen Beck

"Within the subject of mathematics there is a two fold purpose, to prepare students for college entrance, and to train them for the vocational world," stated Mrs. Turpin. And with an excellent Math Department such as Poway High School's these purposes were allotted to the students. Mr. Gibby remarked "We have one of the strongest Math Departments in the county." The teachers' ability to prepare students definitely could be seen in the Advanced Placement Tests that were given, in which ninety percent of the students passed.

A new course in mathematics was added this year. The course was called Intermediate Algebra. This course was suggested to be taken after Geometry, allowing the students to concentrate on the heavy advanced stages of Algebra, without having to go into Trigonometry.

New teachers as well were added this year. Mr. Elrod and Mr. Koelzer brought the total number of math teachers up to eighteen. And not only did Poway High School's Math Department add a new class, as well as new teachers, it prepared students for a life after high school.

ROP Offers Job Trades

By Stephanie Allen

During the past year, many students participated in Regional Occupation Programs. These classes offered job training skills to county residents aged sixteen and over.

Among the ROP courses, was a class that taught Animal Health. The instructor, Mr. Stauf stressed, "We train the student so when they leave high school they will be able to go right to work, at a level above a basic hiree." Whereas another ROP class, Child Care, developed the basic fundamentals of helping a child through his growing years.

The students taking the class began a four-week training period in September. Mrs. Kimball, the head of the child development center, provided insight on how to let the young children explore skills that would help them learn from others. The students who interacted with the children also gained a valuable education. "By watching them grow, it helps me learn of what I want to do in the future," commented Kris Sampson.

Goals To Benefit Life

By Gretchen Beck

Ambition and determination were major components of Special Education students' goal oriented year. These components could be seen through vocational training programs which enabled them to learn certain types of work. Many of the students were able to experience working at particular areas during school hours. A few places where the students trained and worked were the District Transportation Department, and the Rancho Bernardo Convalescent Home. The Senior Civitan Club and a Poway Unified School District van provided transportation for the students to get to their various work areas. Maribeth Wilson concluded with an overall view of what she would like to see the students gain from this curriculum. "The goal of the Special Education class is to provide on-the-job training to our students for competitive employment and a productive life after high school."

Reviewing for his semester finals, Dennis Roesner scans the paper for some last minute information.

An Interest In Learning

By Stephanie Allen

"My physical science class has taught me a lot about the world around me," commented Kari Becker.

Courses ranging from Biology to Chemistry were offered to the student. Often these courses left many students confused. In the Chemistry courses extra credit was offered to the student. This way one could benefit in the learning aspect as well as in helping their grade. The extra credit was on computer disks, which would take the student step by step, through many types of difficult problems.

The science teachers also tried to make their classes interesting. "I try hands on experiments in science, so it will be a learning experiment of why something happened," remarked science teacher Melavel Odviar. Students also felt the same. "I have learned a lot in science this year, the teachers make it very interesting with experiments, and different ideas of learning, made it even more enjoyable," stated Christy Fortney. And by making the classes interesting the students learned more and enjoyed the classes as a whole.

Assistants Give Help

By Gretchen Beck

"Oh no I haven't learned my Algebra chapter yet and tomorrow's the test": a common statement which could be heard in the math resource center. Through Poway High School's assistants, students' dilemmas could be solved. "The assistants are always willing to assist me with problems on homework," stated Tom Bonnette. The students felt that it was worthwhile to be able to come out from talking to an assistant, and to know the particular subject material. "I think it's rewarding to the students because it gives them a better feeling for whatever subject they need help in." Not only did the students find it gratifying but the assistants felt the same. Pat Lee, an assistant stated, "It's rewarding to me to help students, and then to see the spectacular results." Mr. Barone summed it up by saying, "The assistants do more than just type and answer the phone. They do a superb job of dealing with people, adults as well as teenagers."

Diversity Among Styles

Fashions, fads and the latest styles remained an important outlet of individualism with the students of PHS over the 1987 school year. Flashy colors and styles uniquely separated each of the students that attended the school. The year of 1987 also brought on many student opinions and feelings. The general student population seemed much more aware of the things that were going on around the campus than in past years. "The students seem to know their rights as individuals, and they are standing up and fighting the issues that they don't agree with," stated one anonymous teacher.

Controversies such as legal banning of the smoking area, the MORP dance issue, and other key episodes started the students vocalizing their opinions. Pilar Melendez added, "I think that the administration should instill more trust in the students! We're not all trying to break the rules!"

Overall, the year went relatively smoothly, and the students carried on with their activities and lives as usual.

If the Style Fits Wear it

By Julie Dickinson

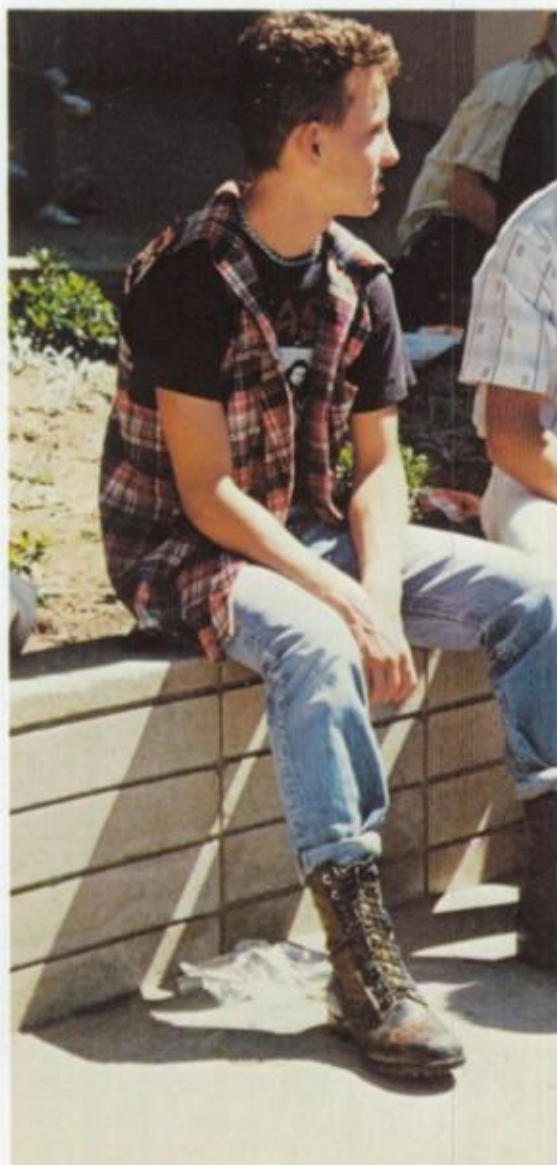

What is fashion? Well, it's the way and style that an individual dressed. And PHS students do know their fashion! The key to looking great was obtained by many of Poway High's most fashion conscious people. By walking around campus, one could witness the latest "trendy" styles, the preppy look, the surfer look, and every other style that could come to mind.

"Variety in fashion is great. That way we don't have a school full of clones!" stated Irene Karvellas. "I like the fact, that at PHS you can wear whatever you want and no one really cares," said Teri Miley. Fashion around

PHS was pretty flexible over the 86-87 school year; there wasn't really a right or wrong. Top fashion designers called this year a "year of transition; no one really knows what's in or out."

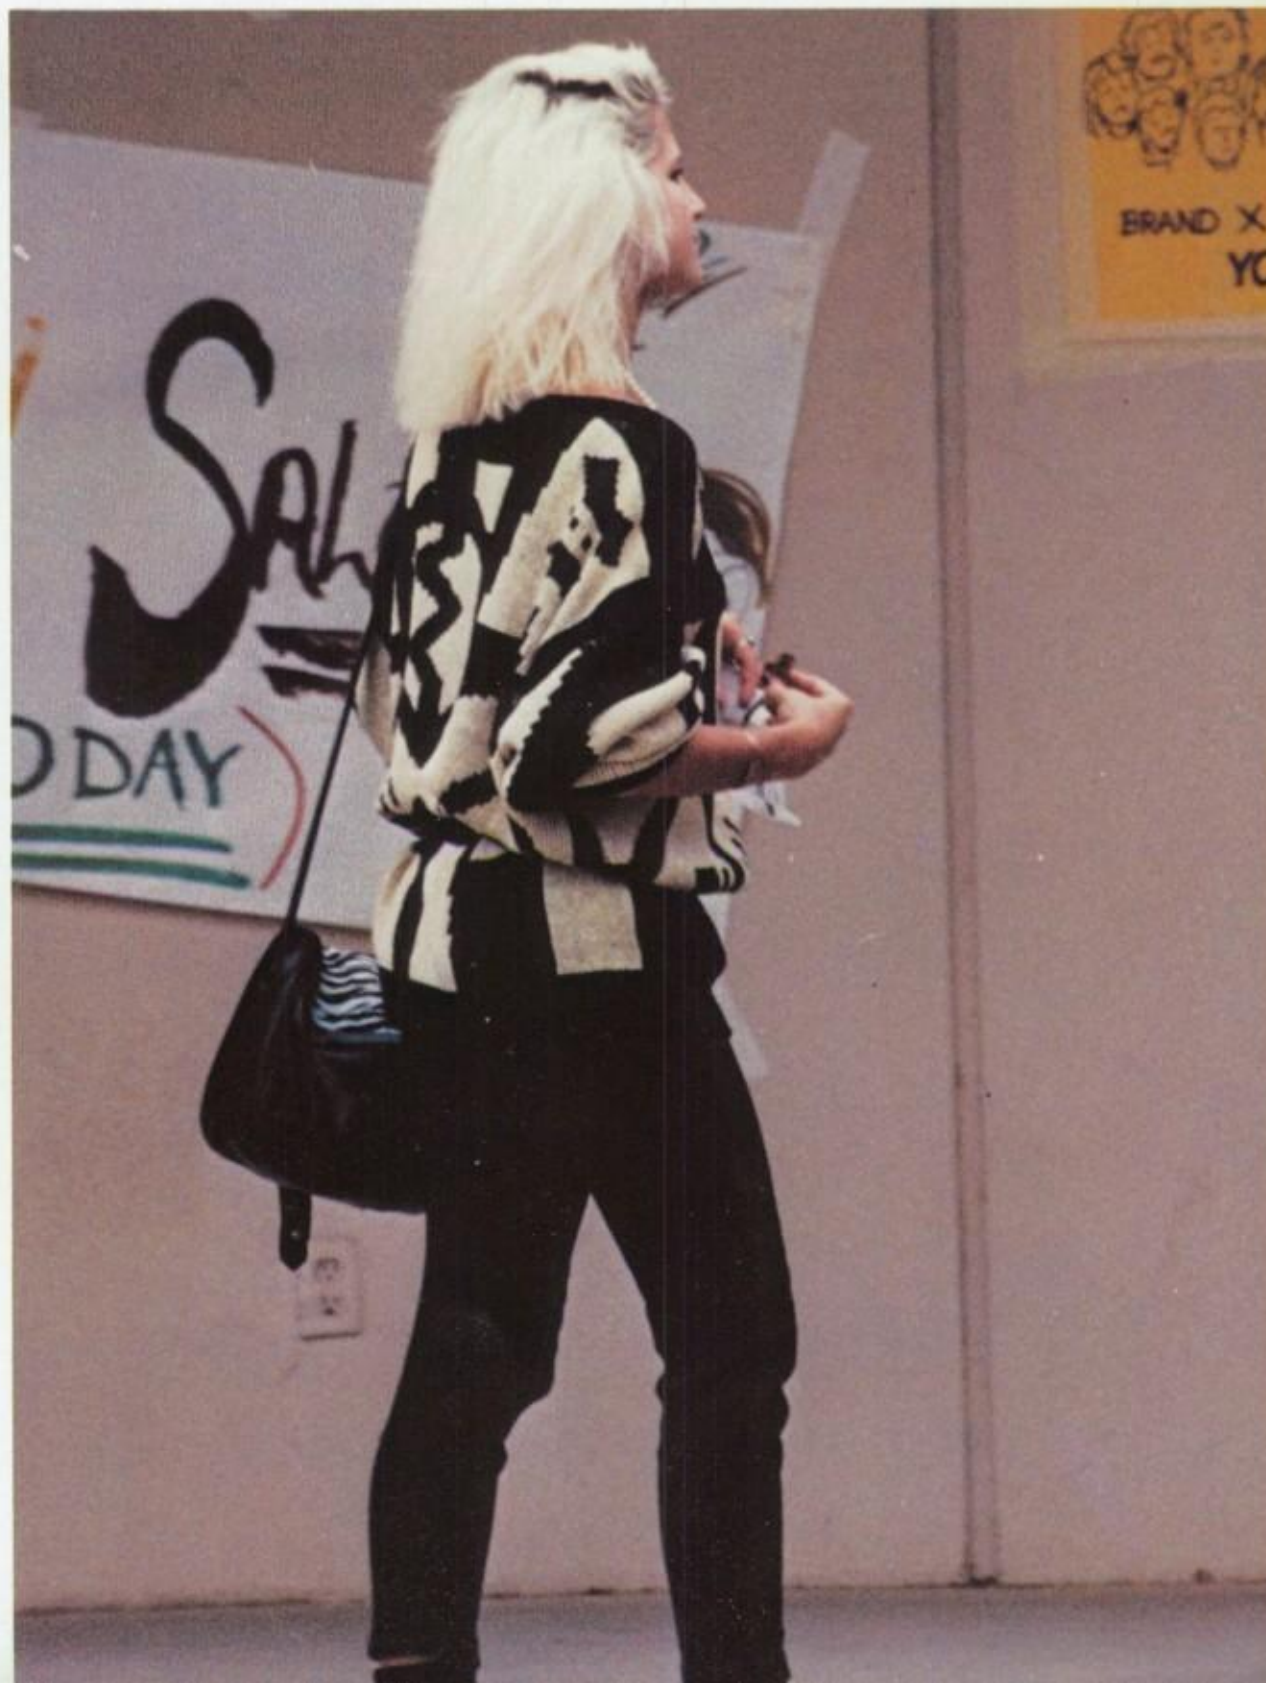

Leif Gigstad commented on the fashion around PHS, "It keeps school interesting." One student said, "There are a lot of groups of people who dress alike, almost identical. But that's just some of them; there are a lot of very individualized people too. Basically, PHS students have class!" Fashion, as well as other aspects, played a very important role in the student's lives.

Opinions Enable Self-Expression

By Tonia Reinys

From corners of the school, extending from the far reaches of agriculture across the quad and out onto the athletic fields, students expressed their views this year. Cluttered blackboards proudly commending or denouncing the people and ideas at Poway High remained full for the duration of 1986-1987 in the girls E-Building bathroom. Personal views also were discarded by the paper tons as used essays, journal entries, and friendly notes made the one-way plunge into the garbage. In many ways, each student at Poway High voiced his or her opinion. Junior Jon Jaro felt that this openness on campus was unique to Poway High School. "The people here are much more open and relaxed than those in the city. Poway is lucky to be far from there and all its bad attitudes."

With this willingness of self-expression, a variety of opinions could be found on a single topic. This diversity of thoughts and styles mirrored the individuality of the student body. As differences in age, background, personal tastes, and interests affected the appearance of the individuals, thoughts also reflect these differences.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

How do you feel about the education you are receiving at Poway High?

I guess it's all right if you really want to learn — Ted McCarron

It's lacking in innovation. While students are given a choice in what to study, they are given no choice in how to study — David Nelson

It's okay — Jessica Berger

It's rounded, but not time to meet college requirements — Derek Stiles

PHS has one of the best educational programs I've seen — Deanna Hart

Adequate. I feel most of the teachers could relax and have fun. I think if teachers enjoy their subjects, students will also — Anna Jacobs

I think that it's a good education — German Machada

This school gives More than I deserve — Brandon Zinsmeista

I've enjoyed Poway because of the friends I've made — Leif Gigstad.

I really love the freedom we get here — Libby McLaughlin

The students and teachers at PHS helped me feel at home — Dave Chmelka

Since I've been at Poway High, I've become more spirited — Mike Cormier

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

What do you enjoy most about Poway High School?

What I enjoy most is the music on Fridays at lunch. It makes the day go by faster — Jeff Schreiber

The freedom. It's not at all like junior high. I also like how the teachers trust you more. It makes you feel older — Kathy Wolski

Going home early on Wednesday and Thursday — Erik Pizytulski

I enjoy the rural location of the school — Nathan Rollins

Meeting people and teachers — Sean Poza

The sports program — Steve Pineault

I enjoy the individualism. There are not many cliques and each student goes after what he wants — Andrea Cygelman

Life is like grass, when you think you're growing, you get mowed down. — Mike Heap

The majority of teachers don't take time to explain the topics — Kim Wayland

To freshmen: Buck up little camper, it gets worse — Bill Stoddard

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

What has been your biggest problem at Poway High?

Keeping my grades up and running the mile — Kim Visconsi

Waking up in time to get to school — Leif Gigstad

Passing U.S. History — Rusty Place

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

What do you plan to be doing in 10 years?

In 10 years, I will be working and going to college — Lisa Taylor

POWAY BURSTS BOUNDS

By Tonia Reinys

Tommy and Tina Titan shivered in a cold mist on a blustery January morning in anticipation of the bus's arrival. Moments later in a cloud of diesel smoke, the transport rattled to a stop and the fight for a seat began. Swarms of bus-banished students jammed aboard and endured the bumpy ride only to stop off onto the overcrowded campus of Poway High.

Students all over the school battled one another each school day this year as a result of the constant increase in enrollment. Lines for the bathrooms during break fell short of trailing out the door while enormous crowds buzzed anxiously around the red and white striped wienie hut. Classes spilled students from behind bulging doors upon the sound of the bell and locker blocks vanished from sight as masses lucky enough to receive lockers, stowed their belongings.

Even those students lucky enough to avoid the bus system were caught by the crowds upon the daily attempt to escape the parking lot. Upwards of 200 impatient engines raced in the struggle to ooze onto Espola Road. "There are just too many students at this school!" cried Amy Blackburn. ■

Back for the Last Look

"We made it!" roared the class of '87 as hats and arms flew in the air. Graduation was filled with memories of four years of trial and error that will stay with this class for many years to come. "The thing that I will remember most about High School are the friends I made," stated Julie Farle. Students prepared to leave the security of friends, family and a lifestyle that had shaped their lives for the last four years. "I'm sort of nervous, but I'm excited too," admitted Bridget Gast.

Throughout their senior year many students suffered from that unavoidable disease known as Senioritis. As Tracey Winston recalled, "Your mind wanders and all you can think about is graduation." This was just one of the symptoms of Senioritis, some of the others were frequent absences and general restlessness in class. Civics teacher Mr. Holtz noted, "They spend more time thinking about the future than the present."

Seniors indulged in a fun and competitive league of broom hockey at the UTC skating rink. "I thought it was important to go," commented Kim Ryal, "because it was our last time to be at this school with these friends doing these crazy things." Class spirit was unified further by frequent tailgate parties that preceded home football games. "I got to know my classmates better," commented Suzy Southwood, "and I had a great time."

With the memories of long classes, romantic dances, and numerous sports victories cemented in the minds of the graduating class, they can move steadily into the future with confidence and experience. "It will be really different being in a new place away from my family," replied Kathy Egan. As the laughter and tears of graduation finished echoing through the long halls of Poway High, the senior class moved courageously into a world full of new expectations and demands.

Seniors Celebrate Third Victory

Debi Quesenberry

"Eighty-seven, eighty-seven, eighty, eighty, eighty, eighty, eighty-seven!" screamed the seniors as their winning homecoming float toured the Poway High Stadium. For the third year in a row, the seniors shared in the victory of another success.

Many weekends were spent at the Rancho Bernardo Winery. "The Winery holds many memories of how our class pulled together," remembered Kristen Rangel. This year the seniors mastered their techniques, pulling off yet another winning idea for this year's theme of "Poway High School's Twenty-fifth Anniversary."

The building of the float was a festive occasion. "All the people who didn't get

The building of the float was a festive occasion. "All the people who didn't get involved really missed out," replied Michelle Bellefeuille.

The float consisted of two parts. The first part was divided into two sections, a 1961 and a 1986 Homecoming dance, both equipped with special effects. The second part trailed behind with a birthday cake filled with helium balloons which filled the air.

"The pressure was on us this year to

A famous Senior

Ms. Wagner, commonly known as "Wag," was a large part of the framework of the senior class. As the class advisor, she helped the seniors make the most out of their last year at Poway High. Much of her own time was spent working with them to put together three winning homecoming floats, organizing parties, and financing fund raisers. Her ideas boosted class enthusiasm, pulling the senior class together. "Wag has dedicated so much of her time in uniting our class," said Tami Watkins.

"Wag" did more than just advise though. Her friendship with students has made a lasting impression on all those who have gotten to know her. "Wag isn't just another advisor, she's everyone's friend," added Julie Dickinson. Ms. Wagner can be referred to as just one of the group. Throughout her four years of advising "She's risen above all other advisors," replied Jenny Selser.

Ms. Wagner could be found at all class events. If seniors were there, so was she. Her class spirit motivated all those seniors involved. "Wag is the most important part of our class. She's always around to help whoever needs it," stated Mika Phinney. "Wag" has left a special impact on the Class of '87.

"We got spirit, yes we do. We got spirit, how 'bout you?" shouted Tami Watkins and Brian Maeinschein from the PHS sidelines. tans, Tami and Brian were at the top of the list.

"Tami is always so enthusiastic about school activities," commented Jenny Selser. "She was my first choice." Tami's energy extended into a variety of areas. During her senior year Tami worked for her second time on the year-book staff and served on ASB as clubs Commissioner. Tami also actively participated in the Poway chapter of SADD. "You get out of school what you put into it," stated Tami, and she did her best to live up to this motto.

Class involvement also carried Brian Maeinschein through his Senior year with fun and flair. Whether it was hosting an afternoon pep rally on the quad or making a speech at the dedication of the new stadium, Brian represented Poway High with pride. "It was a great honor to as the ASB President my senior year," claimed Brian.

As the sweat and cheers of games won and lost drifted from the playing fields, the class of 1987 can reflect on their last year with a smile. Ms. Wagner the class of '87's advisor mentioned, "Brian and Tami were lively and vivacious and always there to boost the school spirit."

An Obvious Interest in People

Debi Quesenberry

What made Jared Hamilton and Ruth Ludwig stand out? Was it because they cared so much about their classmates, or was it their way of making people feel good? It had to be both. That's why seniors chose them for having the "Best Personality."

"I like people," admitted both Jared and Ruth. Around campus, they could be found striking up conversations with friends. They were always there to give advice to someone in need or to just listen if someone wanted to talk. "They will always be remembered for their interest in others," commented Pilar Melendez.

"I'm not the most out-going guy, but I get along with people," confessed Jared. He may not have found himself out-going, but the Class of '87 thought differently.

What does it take to have the "look that people notice"? "I feel good looks don't come from makeup and clothes," explained Shelly. "It comes from inside." Both Jon and Shelly concern themselves with being comfortable rather than fixing themselves up to try to impress other people. "Shelly is just naturally pretty," noticed Bonnie Boswell. Rick Bugado demonstrates a simple formula on the board.

Logarithms, formulas, polynomials, formulas, graphs, formulas, and more formulas! For Rick Bugado, it all started in Advanced Algebra and Geometry. As a senior, he had finished high school in Calculus BC. This may not have seemed outstanding to some, but it was his enthusiasm in the subject that stood out.

"Math is one subject that depends on how good you are. The teacher has nothing to do with it," felt Rick. His teachers may or may not have agreed, but he sure proved himself over the years and has

"I like the contests," said Rick. He was in two contests at Poway High. His junior year, he won first place and was the "Most Outstanding Junior in Math." With this title, Rick received the opportunity to go to Cal Poly to take part in their contest over the summer.

When Rick found out that he was this year's most "Outstanding Senior in Math," a big smile came to his face. "Math doesn't come easy to me, but it's a challenge," confessed Rick.

Back on the Write Track

"Not another essay," wailed a distressed student. While some students cringed at the thought of writing Tami Marko jumped at the chance. This integrity and enthusiasm earned Tami the admiration of the Poway High English staff who rewarded her with the honor of Outstanding in English. "Tami is a multit talented student," commented Mr. Barone.

Tami spent a year on the Iliad staff tackling such controversial topics as drunk driving and teenage sexuality. "My favorite classes were Honors Humanities and Writing Seminar because you could write whatever you wanted," recalled Tami. Tami was so impressed by these classes that she started a club just for writers on campus, Writers Anonymous. Tami plans to use her writing ability in international relations or journalism. The colleges Baylor, in Texas, and Swarthmore, in Pennsylvania, stand at the top of her list because of the exceptional reputations.

When Tami isn't writing, she spends a lot of time composing songs on the piano. "She is a real inspiration," stated Ruth Ludwig. "She's an insightful writer and is always willing to listen to other peoples problems and help them," mentioned Sam Lekus. Through skill and perseverance Tami Marko wrote a successful final chapter in her high school career and now looks forward to a new start in "the real world."

Seniors Get the Last Laugh

Debi Quesenberry

"If school can be fun, people can get more out of it." This was the motto of this year's senior "Class Clowns." Sheila Black and Ross O'Briant were always around to make someone laugh. Whether it was in or out of class, they knew how to get a smile out of someone.

"Baa Haa Haa!" was a famous reply around the Poway High campus. We can blame Sheila for that goofy laugh which often echoed through the halls. "I live for Pee Wee Herman. I've seen his movie 58 times," bragged Sheila jokingly. "People always laugh at me no matter what I do." Sheila was always full of energy with a mission to make people laugh. When told she was nominated for the craziest girl on campus, she replied "scary!"

"I never take things too seriously," admitted Ross. He could be found anywhere pulling some kind of prank. In the classroom, his sense of humor always eased the tension and made the class time go faster.

Their presence added a touch of craziness to the day. They kept the days from seeming too long and boring. They both summed it up by saying, "We'd rather see people laugh."

Pablo Picasso, Leonardo DaVinci, and Lauren Randell. All of these names bring to mind visions of great artists. "Lauren had the making of a true artist," commented her long-time art teacher Mr. Walker. "She was always determined to do her best."

Lauren was very determined and wouldn't settle for anything but her best work. "We had a letter printing assignment once," remembered Lauren. "It took me six weeks to get that done, but I got a perfect grade." Lauren used all sorts of materials for her work but especially liked to sketch and found the contrast of black and white dramatic," mentioned Kristi Greatorex, "I always liked to see what Lauren would come up with next."

When Lauren finally decided to take a break from drawing and painting you could find her at The California Performing Arts Center dancing. "When I'm not dancing, I'm drawing," stated Lauren. "It's either one or the other."

Lauren looked toward art fashion illustration as a possible career and hopes to learn more about it at The Art Center School in Pasadena. Whatever the future may hold for Lauren Randall, she can face it with fresh confidence and natural talent. Lauren finished up by adding, "If you believe in yourself, nothing is impossible."

By Debi Quesenberry

Dribbling down the court, using his natural speed and grace, he makes it to the basket and shoots. His shot is blocked by a tall coordinated girl, but he rebounds the ball and scores two points for the Poway Titans.

This reflects upon only one example of the skills that this year's "Most Athletic" seniors possessed. Deanne Anasta's and Harlan Carroll's ability and wide variety of sports made them prime choices for this honor. They divided their schedules between academics and sports, allotting time to do outstanding in both areas. "It's a matter of discipline," said Deanne. Although Harlan was pressured from both school and sports, he still maintained his sense of humor.

When asked about their favorite sports, Deanne quickly claimed volleyball and Harlan answered football. Even though Deanne showed more enthusiasm in volleyball, she did equally well in both gymnastics and basketball. Besides being cornerback in football, Harlan played forward in basketball.

Both Deanne and Harlan succeeded in adding agility and expertise to Poway High's sports program. They agreed that without sports, they wouldn't know what to do with their time. "Hollywood" Harlan summed it up by saying, "When you're not in sports, you get lazy."

Kris Schmidt catches up on current events in the Resource Center.

"The world, she be round!" exclaimed Christopher Columbus as he gathered up his belongings and set out to prove his theory. History is full of great deeds and accomplishments. While some cringe at the thought of laboring over history books, Kris Schmidt enjoyed it.

History always interested Kris. Around her house history was discussed on a daily basis and Kris became aware of its importance. "We need to study the past," commented Kris, "so we can get an idea of what the future will hold."

We must study the past so we can grasp the future
— Kris Schmidt

Kris isn't always concerned with the past. During her senior year she looked forward to attending Long Beach State and a possible career in graphic arts and commercial advertising. "Kris is real optimistic about the future," stated Kathy Hagan.

Although Kris studies the past and dreams about the future, she has a great time in the present. "There is never a dull moment around Kris," admitted Elizabeth Taylor, "she is full of energy." Kris learned from the past, enjoyed the present and reached for her dreams.

Seniors Dress to Kill

Kenny Battle and Pilar Melendez were chosen by this year's senior class as "Best Dressed" and succeeded in living up to that title. "I like to look my best," admitted Pilar. Kenny agreed and added, "Wearing nice clothes makes me feel good." Their unique styles added personality and flair to the fashion trends of Poway High.

"I never follow a certain style," Kenny remarked, "I like to be different." Many recognized their voguishness and commented on their ability to separate themselves from others. They always had a way to express themselves by the things they wore. "Pilar and Kenny seem to stand out in any crowd," said Phillip Bairley.

"Why me?" asked Pilar, "A lot of people dress nice." This may have been true, but because of their originality and innate good taste, they were obvious choices for "Best Dressed" by their peers.

Fitz Pitchford proudly displays his French horn.

Drum roll please! Fitz Pitchford, this year's "Most Outstanding Senior in Music," deserved more than a standing ovation. "It's his ability, versatility, commitment, and dedication in all aspects of the music program that makes him so outstanding," said Mr. Davis, the Director of Bands.

Fitz expressed much enthusiasm his three years here at Poway High. He participated in the wind symphony, jazz ensemble, musicals and marching bands. One could hear him at football and basketball games entertaining the crowd with his synthesizer. Fitz was mostly known for the French horn, but can play almost any instrument. "He's incredibly gifted," praised Julie Hartman.

Fitz's musical career started when his mother enrolled him in piano lessons. From there, his musical abilities progressed. Fitz confessed, "It hasn't been easy, but I enjoy it."

He has written music and has even produced a tape called "Metamorphosis", which consists of all different kinds of music. "It has everything from classical to rock," stated Jennifer Stampfli.

Fitz became popular with the band during his three years here. His friends regard him as having been inspirational. "I don't think I could be where I am today without the instruction I've had over the years," said Fitz. Fitz Pitchford, please take a bow.

'TILL DEATH DO US PART

"I always see them together." "They are such a cute couple." "How do they do it?" Who are all these comments referring to? The class couple Kim Bednar and Mike Tomlinson, of course. "They always seem to be together," said Matt Bently.

This devoted pair have seen each other exclusively for almost two years. They met in the romantic setting of Mrs. Clark's math class. "We started talking in class," remembered Kim, "then one day he asked me out on a date." The romance began on the first date at the Chargers football game and grew into a lasting relationship. "The key to a good relationship," stated Mike, "is being able to talk to each other and you have to have a sense of humor."

Kim and Mike don't have the future completely mapped out yet, they plan to attack it on a day to day basis. College is definitely in the set-up though. They both applied to UCSB and hope to be able to attend college together. "They have learned to be committed," stated Debi

Even Monkeys Set Examples

By Debi Quesenberry

Michelle, Dan, Matt and Jennifer take off a few minutes to monkey around.

They may have seemed to be monkeying around a lot, but they actually had their job cut out for them. Their task seemed endless. Day in and day out, Matt Golden, Michelle Bellefeuille, Jennifer Meadows, and Dan Orner dealt with how to run a successful senior class. Undoubtedly, the four of them made 1987 a year for all seniors to remember.

With each activity, the senior class grew closer their last year at Poway High. Senior Breakfasts, broom hockey games, and tailgate parties were just a few of the responsibilities that rested on the shoulders of the four class officers. "It was a lot of work, but it was fun. I'm happy to have been able to act in such a big part for the senior class," said Matt Golden.

They all agreed that trying to organize such a large group of students was a chore. "Our job was to do things for the senior class. I'm proud of all the people that contributed something," replied Michelle Bellefeuille. The class pulled together to make the year, before they graduated, the most fun.

The officers led the seniors in a "new direction," as Dan Orner put it, by thinking of creative ways for seniors to spend time together. This year's senior class set an example for those following in their footsteps.

The Scientific Approach

By Debi Quesenberry

Who would you go to if you wanted to know where all living things came from? Seniors, if they didn't already know the answer to this question, could speak with Jennifer Meadows because of her expertise in the study of science. Jennifer took science three years and mastered Biology, Chemistry, and AP Biology, giving her the honor of being known as "Most Outstanding Senior in Science."

"Jennifer has always impressed me as a most conscientious student," praised Mrs. Lessard. "She approaches each day with an extremely positive attitude. This is very important in science. So many of our outstanding scientists have been successful because of their patience and persistent attitudes." Those teachers who had the opportunity to have Jennifer in class knew that her attitude gave her the "extra edge" in being successful.

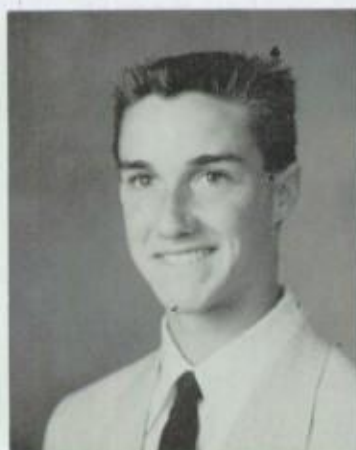

"Biology is the most interesting of the sciences because it deals with the process of all living things," said Jennifer. This year Mrs. Lessard gave her a challenge in AP Biology and made her an expert in this area. "Her ability is only surpassed by her determination to do well," added Mrs. Lessard.

Talent on the Stage

By Kiki Windsor

Mike Heap discovers hidden treasures in the prop room.

"A drumroll please," said the tuxedoed announcer, "and the winner of Most Outstanding in Drama is . . . Mike Heap." "I can't believe it!" exclaimed Mike. "I always looked up to the people that got this award. I thought that someday I would get it."

Mrs. Manos, his first and only drama teacher, knew otherwise. "Mike has natural talent," she explained, "and he has a wonderful stage presence." Mike liked to strut his stuff in character roles like Nicely Nicely Johnson in Guys and Dolls and Marion San in Little Abner. "Mike was a lot of fun to watch," remembered Shannon McNally, "He really gets into his parts." Mike also showed his musical flair on "Puttin on the Hits" when he and his band did their impression of Billy Idol's song "Rebel Yell."

Mike will be attending Brigham Young University in the fall and plans to go there for his first two years and then transfer to a college in Los Angeles to be closer to the acting action. "If I don't make it in acting, I'll become an artist," stated Mike, "just as long as I'm my own boss." However Mike eventually makes a living, you can be sure that he will do it creatively. Mike found that the high school years were a time of growing and learning, and he took the time and managed to build a strong foundation that will prove to be secure out in the "real world."

Academically Sound 4.0

By Kiki Windsor

"Homework! Homework! Give me a break!" cried a weary bookbound student. As the class of '87 drew closer to graduation more students found themselves abandoning their books. Two students remained faithful to their studies, Lisa Yum and Sean Depriest worked hard and earned the honor of Most Scholarly. "I never really considered myself the studious type," exclaimed Liza.

Both Sean and Liza found this award as quite a surprise. "I don't feel like I study a lot," claimed Sean. The two liked to spend more time outdoors than studying. Liza swam for three years of the varsity swim team and played two years of tennis for the school. Sean also enjoyed the great outdoors spontaneous by playing LaCrosse. "Sean was a guy," recalled Matt Baily, "He'd do just about anything at the drop of a hat."

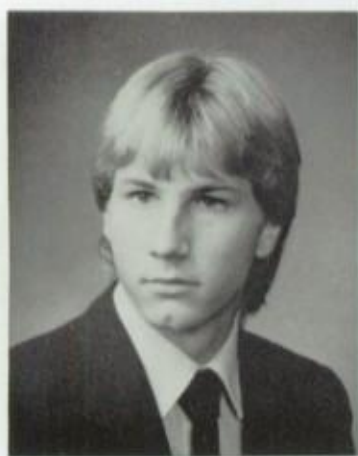

Whether or not the pair considered themselves to be studious their grade point averages showed that they must be. With accumulative GPA's of 4.0+ the two have a prosperous future ahead. Liza plans to attend Stanford or Harvard where she might pursue a career in medicine. Sean plans to go to UCSD and study to be a doctor of pathology. Wherever the path of life may lead them the study habits these two have learned will be a distinct advantage to them in the future.

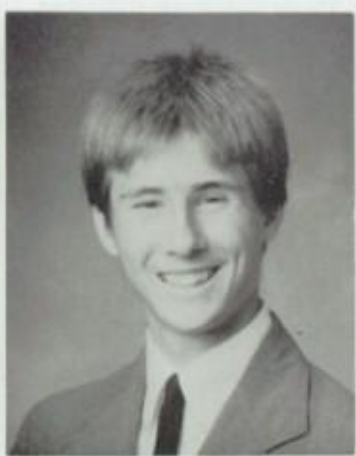

Liza Yum and Sean Depriest share a good book in the library.

What Are Your Plans After High School?

Alyssa Karalekas — I plan to go to college and study theatre and become a soap opera star.

John Gillespie — I'm going to go to a junior college and move out to the coast.

Tracy Winston — I'm going to attend the Fashion Institute of Interior Design in San Diego.

Joanne Reynolds — I plan to work for a while and then attend the School for Missions and become a Missionary.

Noreen Kinsler — I will go to Northern Arizona University and major in communications.

Jennifer Muelbauer — The first thing I am going to do is go to a big party then I'll go to college and major in business.

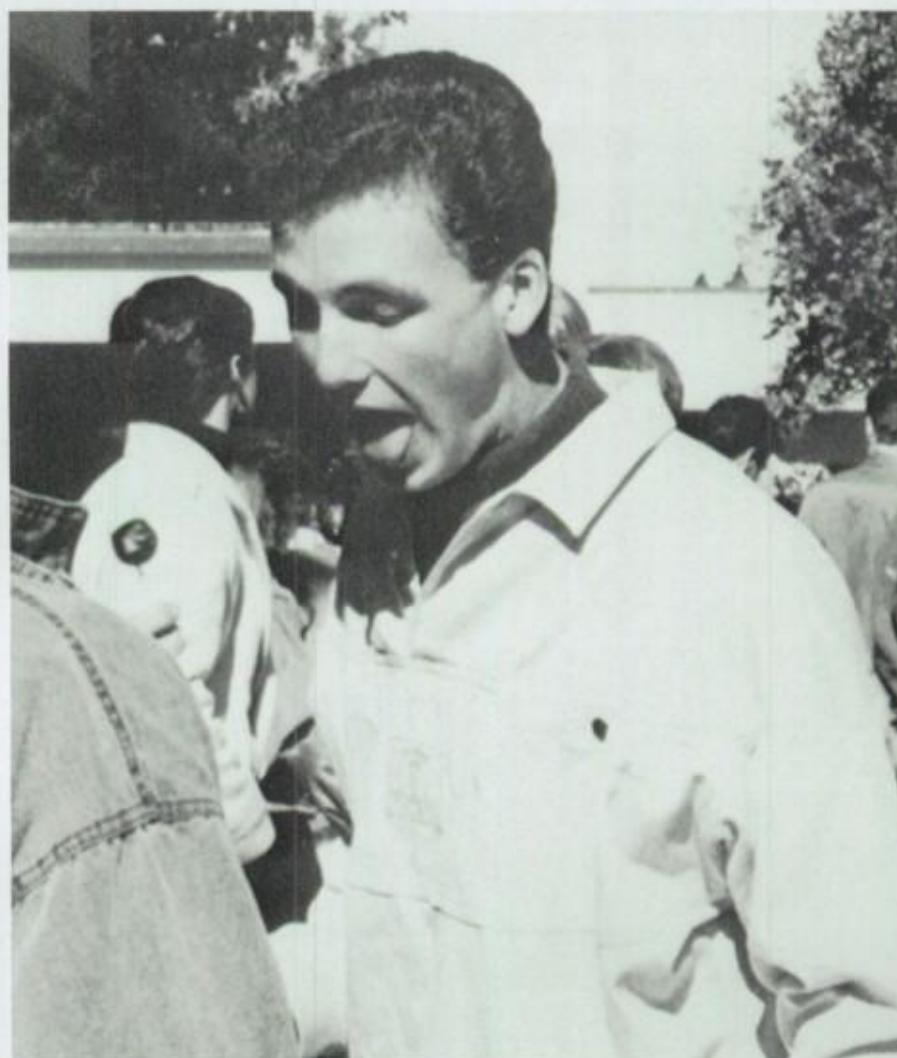

Jenny Selser — I will attend N.A.U. and obtain my degree in public administrations then get married and have three kids.

Cindy Hilbig has time to think about the future as she waits for her readmit.

Brian Napierala wonders if art might be a good career choice.

A group of straight-faced seniors are speechless while watching one of their last high school pep rallies.

Brett Dixon tells his friend what he thinks of doing homework.

Michelle Malliet realizes ordering graduation announcements can be confusing.

Andrew J. Wajkowski — When I graduate I plan to go into the Navy. After that I hope to help my father run his construction company.

Julie Dickinson — I plan on staying very warm and happy while attending Michigan State University and majoring in journalism.

Julie Hartman — I will attend Cal State Northridge and major in communications. Then I'm going to fulfill a dream and become a flight attendant and fly everywhere.

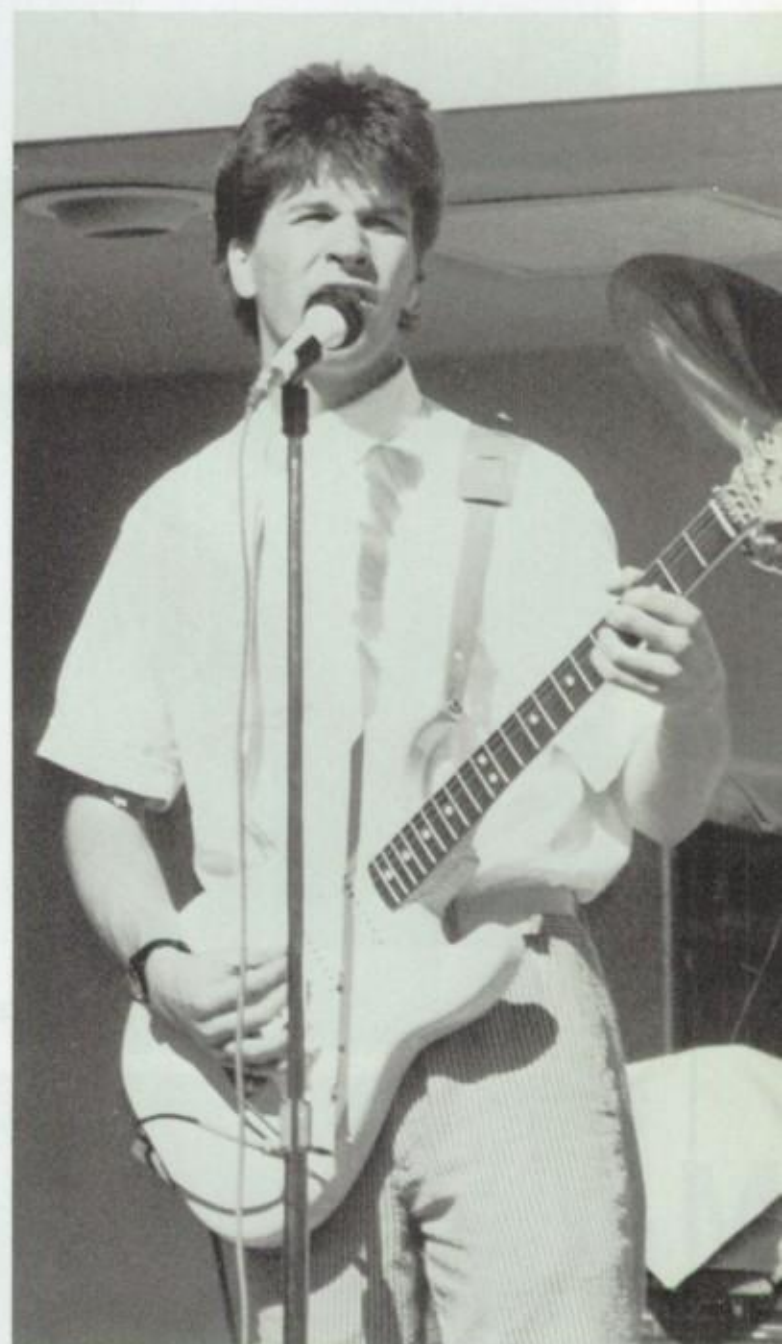

Mika Phinney — After high school I'm going to UCSB and major in education then I'm going to teach kindergarten.

Jay Ranch — I am probably going to a community college and after that I'm not sure what.

Holly Thomas — I am going to go to college out most importantly I am going to remain a sane happy person enjoying life to its fullest.

Kim Ryal — This summer I am traveling to Europe and I will be attending Christ Community College Irvine where I'll be studying drama so I can teach at High School.

Future rock star Steve Gouveia gets experience performing on the quad.

Lori Raber, Jenny Selser and Julie Dickinson out roaming the halls again?

Kiki Windsor — I am going to go to SDSU for my first two years and then transfer to UCLA and major in acting and one day be a famous actress.

Lori Marcum — After high school I plan to live, live, live! Hopefully I will be attending SDSU to study theatre arts and have fun.

Tonia Reinys — Graduation will only serve as the first day of school for me. I'll have eight years of pre-med and medical school.

Kimberly Chesterfield — I am going to join the Navy and become an electronics technician. I also want to travel around the world.

Paul Wittkamp — I plan to go to a nuclear power school and work for the government.

Yvonne Heine — Actually I really am not too sure, but I'm going to Palomar and hopefully have something to do with fashion.

Tim Bowman bows his head in silence as Erin Rein picks apart her food.

knows, we've been through a lot, but we make it with class! Timmy- You've always been the best. Luv ya!

Juniors Climbed Ladders to Success

By Sarah Massengill

For a person to be able to juggle the demanding homework, the fun school related and extra-curricular activities of their junior year and still be able to hold a class office, this takes a lot of hard work and determination. This year the junior class had officers determined to make this year well worth the wait. Rob Abramson held the demanding position as the Junior class President while Porsche Melendez was his supportive Vice President. Suzie Fink did an excellent job as the Secretary and Sherri Fants efficiently kept track of the class budget. These four combined their ideas and together organized what was one of the best years so far for the class of '88.

With a turn out of over 300 nerdy couples, it was obvious that MORP was nothing short of a success. Irene Karvelas commented, "I think they did a great job by getting a disk jockey instead of a live band!"

When June hit Poway High in the midst of the Pre-Summer excitement, the Junior class' determination shone with the Prom held in Sea World's beautiful pavillion. Prom beautifully put an end to the school events.

After the Prom was complete these four could finally sit back, relax, and rave over all of the successes they'd had through the year. Porsche Melendez summed up the year with three words, "exciting, demanding and rewarding!"

L to R: Rob Abramson, Sherri Fanta, and Suzie Fink, the Junior class officers.

Juniors Can Be Outrageous

"We are just five best friends that share the same dream," says Glen Murrell from the band Outrage. Outrage, consisting of all juniors, was a band with unique flair and style. Outrage consisted of Chris Marsteller on vocals and bass, Glen Murrell on drums and vocals, Aaron McKay on guitar and vocals, Gilly Naefke on guitars and vocals and Rob Abramson on bass and vocals.

When formed in 1983, they were filled with great hopes and dreams for their future of the band. They wanted to write, make, and produce their own album. They got the name "Outrage" because it was the initial feeling they had towards everything.

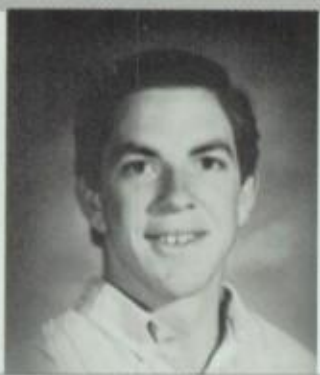

With musical influences, such as The Cure, the Ramones, and the Chocolate Watch Band, "their music is energetic and unique," states Shelly Groomer. Like any other band, strange things happen to them frequently, but the strangest was, "Traveling for 45 minutes to play and there were delays with the other bands setting up their equipment so our time got cut to 4 minutes of playing time," said Chris Marsteller.

The group says that they will continue with the band after High School, and for their fans and supporters we hope that they continue to support Outrage in the future too. We think the times call for simple Rock-Roll and that is what we are trying to accomplish, said Chris Marsteller. As Rob Abramson said, "Somebody stabbed Rock-n-Roll in the back and we're slowly pulling the knife out." In the past year Outrage has definitely proved that they are headed towards accomplishing their goal.

Driving has lost its glamour

By Elisa Smith

For two hundred and fifty yards down Titan Way, cars crawled bumper to bumper every day after school. Angry students hung out of their car windows honking their horns and yelling at those ahead of them. Where did all of the cars come from?

After eleven long years of riding crowded buses, juniors couldn't wait to drive their own cars. However, after the first day of battling the mob of cars, the thrill of driving quickly lost its glamour. Mike Woodall declared that, "Overpopulation is the cause of the traffic problems."

This year's junior class set the record in 1984 as the largest class ever to enter P.H.S. and every year since then the freshman class continues to grow. This also increases the amount of students driving cars. Many students, such as Andy Bailey, didn't mind the wait if they were driving, but agreed that steps should be taken to improve traffic conditions.

Ken Norris suggested that, "a stoplight should be installed at the corner of Titan Way, and Espola. Also, more parking areas should be available." Until then, the juniors of today, and the juniors yet to come, will continue to face the hundreds of cars day after day.

The line of cars on Titan Way vanishes into the distance.

Future Seniors of PHS

by Elisa Smith

As the '86-'87 school year progressed, juniors became more aware of how fast their long-awaited senior year approached. Anticipations of the famed Senioritis, four/five period schedules, and the Senior Wall dominated the juniors' thoughts. But what did the juniors actually think would make their senior year the best year ever?

"It'll be a blast!" was a common expectation among the juniors. Other opinions included Erica Boatright's that "I'll be eighteen and eligible to vote!" Terrie Mays and Tammy Smirin expressed a desire to graduate and enter the "real world" on their own.

The senior activities also received recognition in the dreams of the juniors. From broom hockey to tailgate parties to Prom, the seniors-to-be looked forward to all that awaited them. Dena Minkel revealed her anxiousness for the senior sleepover while Kevin Livesey and Emily Broughton agreed that "Broom hockey will be a lot of fun!"

Most juniors hoped to make their last year at Poway High School the most fun and memorable of their twelve school years. Next year they would find out just how close their expectations were to reality!

Participation Pays Off

by Sarah Massengill

A successful student proves to be strong academically while still being able to contribute towards school and extra-curricular activities. This year the teachers were surveyed and they felt that Jenny Domville and Chris Weber best fulfilled these requirements.

Jenny Domville proved to be a "good student, a quality writer, and she excelled in her Calculus class," stated Ms. Ghafur and Ms. Turpin respectively. Since her freshman year she's been supporting out athletic teams as a Freshman, J.V., and Varsity cheerleader and held down a part-time job.

Chris Weber attended such classes as Calculus, A.P. Physics, and according to Mr. Wymbs, "Chris excels in Hon. Sur. of Amer. Lit." Chris was a soccer player, a varsity track athlete, President of F.B.L.A., and Secretary of C.S.F. and still maintained a 4.0 GPA. Chris was also chosen to represent Poway High School in Washington, D.C. for the Young Astronauts.

Both Jenny and Chris showed that even though some of the toughest classes are offered during the junior year, that doesn't mean you can't get involved. Jenny and Chris agree that, "You can take advantage of these tough classes and with a little extra work, they will help prepare you for the future and make it easier to succeed!"

Successful Juniors, Chris Weber and Jenny Domville.

Juniors Plan for their future

by Anaelisa Romero

The students pay close attention to the facts given by the Cornell University rep.

"With the college representatives that came to Poway High School, it made me realize that I needed to work harder if I wanted to achieve my career goals," stated Kristen Obenchain.

In their junior year, students needed to start to make some important decisions about colleges and career goals. One way the students achieved this was by going to listen and talk with different college representatives.

"I think it is necessary that colleges go out and present themselves to the students, especially the out-of-state colleges. Without talking to us, the students would not be able to find out about campus life and the overall atmosphere of the college," stated William Cox, a representative from Cornell University.

With the help of the college representatives that came to Poway High School throughout the school year, juniors were able to make some very wise decisions for their unestablished future.

Commissioners Start New Traditions

by Sarah Massengill

This past year the junior class elected twice as many commissioners to be in charge of various jobs thus brought in twice as many new ideas and doubled the efficiency to increase their accomplishments.

This year's junior commissioners were Natalie Wright, Fundraising; Glenn Murrell, Prom; Steve Russo, Prom; Michelle Downey, Fundraising; Lisa Kaplan, Publicity; Lynn Benson, Prom; Karen Stiritz, Prom; and Shelly Hayes exemplified leadership as the Head Commissioner.

These eight people did an excellent job, showing that they could resist heading down the old, narrow road of tradition and instead be original and creative: for instance ... Prom. Mike Hoffenkamp stated that, "It was great having Prom at Sea World because it's so much closer and the pavillion is so modern." Marnie Chirico added, "It was fun attending Prom at Sea World because it was near the water, and it was really original!"

The commissioners did an excellent job setting new traditions for others to follow in the years to come, and even though they didn't receive the credit or gratitude they deserved, they continue to do a great job making our junior year memorable. Jennifer George agreed by stating, "My junior year was great! The commissioners did a great job, I had a blast!"

The commissioners take over the narrow road.

Challenges Overcome By the Class of '89

By Elisa Smith

As the sophomores reached their second year at Poway High School, more challenges awaited the eager and willing officers. President Britta Vanvranken, Vice President Lysha Younker, Treasurer Jonnelle Bellezzo, and Secretary Lynne Deyarman worked together to plan a successful year.

"It helped having most of the same officers because we know each other and how to work well together," Britta explained. The girls already had the class goals in mind and continued working towards them. "Also, since this was Jonnelle's first year as an officer, she brought in fresh ideas for fundraisers and activities." These fundraisers included bake sales, hot dog sales, and a balloon sale. The money collected went toward the lineup of activities scheduled for this past year and the year yet to come.

The first challenge to be tackled was the Homecoming float. Shannon Murphy and Lisa Deyarman agreed that, "It was a creative idea, and a lot of hard work went into it!" The sophomores biggest challenge of the year came in the form of Winter Ball. Through long hours of planning and preparation, the evening of dinner and dancing prepared everyone's mind and heart for the winter holidays. Through the course of the year, the sophomore class also raised over half of the money for next year's Prom.

Steve Jameson stated that, "Britta, Lysha, Lynne, and Jonelle really dedicated themselves to the class this past year!"

Sweet 16 Gives First Taste of Freedom

By Elisa Smith

Chareese Bedke and Brady Bentley display the joys of turning sixteen.

This past year saw sophomores take many significant steps in their lives. After the arrival of their sixteenth birthday, most of the sophomores experienced such long-awaited privileges as driving and working.

"I'm really excited about getting my license because it's like getting my freedom and independence to go where I want to go," explained many sophomores like Julie Devenere and Kyle Clark. These people no longer relied on Mom and Dad for transportation to the numerous places in their hectic schedules, they only relied on themselves.

Another major step in the sophomores' lives occurred when they found a job. Again, they no longer relied on their parents for money. "Getting a job gives you a sense of satisfaction about earning your own money, and you feel good not having to ask your parents for money," said Dale Hanover. The sophomores were able to finance their own needs and extra activities as a result of their own work.

Three major events occurred in the lives of sophomores this past year. Not only did they reach their sixteenth year, but they also received independence with their driver's license and a job.

Sophomores Strive to Get Ahead

By Sarah Massengill

This year at scheduling time, the sophomores were handed a list of classes and were told which classes they must take. Occasionally, and now more frequently, sophomores go against the norm and they turned aside the required list and signed up for what used to be mainly junior classes. Mrs. Carson stated that, "When I first started teaching I rarely had sophomores and now the amount increases rapidly each year."

Sophomores such as Nancy Nobriga, John Schnurer, Chris Douville, and Sunny Brockmoller, to name only a handful, took such classes as Chemistry, Algebra 3-4, and Math Analysis. No one in general regretted taking these advanced courses at an earlier time. "The only way I'd regret being ahead was if I was really struggling to keep up," commented Erika Swanson.

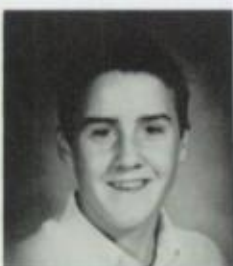

These students who chose to get ahead made a wise and not necessarily easy decision, but these students show that going against the flow could be a very rewarding experience.

Todd Ogi, John Nelson, Zoltan Petro, and Bryan Huey strive to reach higher goals.

A Change for Sophomores

By Anaelisa Romero

For the sophomores that had high hopes in learning finer driving skills at Poway High last year, they were in for a slight surprise. Drivers education was only taught as a seventh period class and at Poway High Night School, and sophomores were forced to take health for a semester.

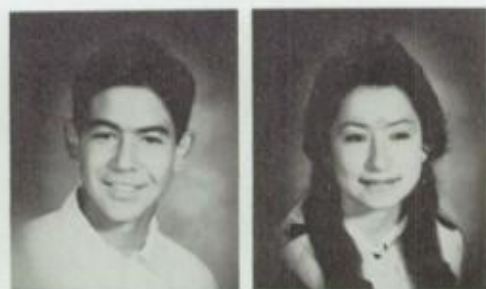

If the students were unable to attend drivers education classes at Poway High, they could attend a driving school. "I think it is unfair that drivers education was only taught as a seventh period class and at night because a lot of people in Poway can't afford the extra expense of a driving school," stated Chris McClure.

The big question was, "If they were offering drivers ed. at night, what was the trouble in offering it during the day?" asked Jason Loeffler. Well, according to Mr. Fisher, "The district was getting pressure from the state to focus on a more academic curriculum."

Due to the changes last year, sophomores were to take health for a semester. Last year's sophomores were the first class to be affected with the change.

Jason Loeffler tries to choose between Health and Driver's Ed.

Sophomores Gain New Respect

By Sarah Massengill

The class of '89 has now completed their second year in their high school career. One of the biggest things that they enjoyed the most was the fact that they were no longer freshmen.

When their freshmen reputation was shed they found that they had more privileges, a better attitude towards school, and more people respected them as students, not freshmen.

Since this was their second year, the students were more associated with the high school which helped bring a better attitude towards their somewhat harder classes. This new attitude helped them earn the respect of their teachers, "Now teachers treat me more like an adult rather than a freshman," remarked Tania Geier. Along with new earned respect, they were able to choose a few of their classes including P.E.

The change from freshmen to sophomores is a big one since you go from being the youngest, newest students to being someone who feels as if they've been there forever. With a more mature attitude and not having the frosh reputation the transition from one grade to another was made easier and more rewarding.

Dave McClain sheds his frosh image and reveals his new self.

Freshmen Climb to New Heights

By Anaelisa Romero

"We wanted to make the class of 1990 proud to be freshmen," stated Erica Maienschein. The hard work and dedication of Erica Maienschein, President, Kathi Thompson, Vice-President, Jennifer Lyles, Secretary, and Sara Paz, Treasurer, certainly paid off last year.

Last year, the freshmen proved that hard work and organization can pay off with their second place Homecoming float. Their theme for the float was "Poway High Silver Anniversary." They were the first freshman class to place second with their homecoming float. "Building the float taught me a lot about organization and getting involved," stated Kathi Thompson.

"We got more from the freshman class than what we expected," said Sara Paz. "The class was very motivated and enthusiastic. We got lots of ideas and support from them during the class meetings," stated Erica Maienschein.

"This year's freshman class accomplished a lot, proving that freshmen can outlive their so called reputation," said Erica Maienschein.

A Positive Attitude Spells Success.

By Elisa Smith

In her first year at PHS, Julie Thill possessed a positive attitude which led to positive results in many areas of her life. "Poway High School is a lot of fun! I like the teachers, and the students are great." Many of Julie's teachers recognized this optimism during class. Mr. Saner explained that, "Julie is a fine student, the best I've had this year." "She participates in class, displays fine conduct and is a very pleasant person!" Mrs. Dabbs also commended Julie for her enthusiasm and effort in literature class. In addition, she received a certificate of merit at the February 3 Parent, Teacher, Student Association Recognition Night.

In addition to her school schedule, Julie was actively involved in areas such as her church and piano. Her interest in the instrument dated back to age five.

Now that her freshman year was behind her, Julie anticipated dedicating the next three years to enjoying Poway High and exploring new areas of interest opened to her here.

Julie Thill shows off her determined look.

Frosh experience culture shock

By Sarah Massengill

We can all remember back to when we were in the eighth grade and the "Rulers of the School." Everyone was excited to get to high school and take over the infamous Senior Wall. Unfortunately things didn't always work out the way they were planned, in 1987.

Coming to the high school from the middle school, "was like coming to a different country," according to Kim Visconsi. Different people surrounded the new frosh, people who had different dress codes, acted differently and the strange customs, oh the strange customs.

As a new flock of strangers entered their territory, the upperclassmen got excited that they'd be able to pass down old traditions which they experienced their frosh year. At many lunch periods you were able to hear, from some far corner of the Quad, a few yells, running feet, and a Thunk as a frosh was stuffed into a trash can. This was known as "the freshman dunk," as referred to by Jay Hyde. Other famous customs included the Frosh Cheerleaders dress-up day, the game known as Freshmen Are Invisible, and trying to lose their freshmen reputation.

A goal for many freshmen was to fit in and toward the end of the year all of the "customs" were stored in the back of their minds only to be referred to during their senior year or in a few years when they had kids of their own coming to them with their freshmen conflicts.

Matt Bently attempts to "Dunk" Troy Smirin.

to Continue

Many freshmen coming into our school were proud to be in high school and to be accepted by teachers and their peers as adults, not children. What they didn't realize was that they're coming into a well recognized school. Our school has produced state champion wrestlers, three time CIF basketball champs, as well as other CIF titles. Also our yearbook won the Sweepstakes of Southern CA, and our band was the second best in the nation. Finally, our school was nominated for an award for its academic achievement. Did all of this popularity and recognition make us proud? "Of course it does, we are lucky to be able to attend such an outstanding school," remarked Stephanie Harris. Did our incoming class think of it all?

Our school has worked very hard in the past to accomplish these feats and the incoming students were equally eager to. "I'm really proud of this school and I'm willing to work extra hard to keep up the good reputation," stated freshman David Anet. With such an excellent past and such a promising incoming class, it seemed pretty clear that our school would remain among the top schools both academically and extra-curricularly.

Current Events

Ellis Island lights New York with stars of celebration over the statue of liberty's 200th birthday.

A Quick Glance Back

American history continued marking its milestones as the world lived through 1986 and 1987. Hopeful attempts of inter-continental peace were set back as two world leaders, Mikhail Gorbachev and President Ronald Reagan could not agree over defense and arms plans. Our President, completing his second term, struck down the nation's trust when news of selling arms to Iran for hostages held captive in Beirut was released. Throughout the school year investigations revealed information about the dealings, but the witnesses continually chose not to testify on the grounds that testimony would possibly incriminate themselves at a later date.

Women again showed their ability when Corazon Aquino ran against Ferdinand Marcos in Philippine's presidential election. She proved that determination could accomplish goals.

Old faces re-familiarized themselves in their celebrity spots. In television and in movies, actors and actresses performed roles lasting in our memories. The almost immediate success of actress Cybill Shepherd and actor Bruce Willis on their hit television series Moonlighting won them titles of man and woman of the year. Vanna White's sudden popularity brought a new, larger audience to the game shows.

Buckingham palace added a new member when Prince Andrew married Sarah Ferguson. The wedding was broadcasted throughout the world.

Drought and overabundance plagued our farmlands as farmers continued to lose money. Many again resorted to auctioning farm machinery and many banks foreclosed on mortgaged houses and farms.

America grew and learned through experience this past year.

Heat withered the southeast corn crops.

World Milestones

Iranscam

President Ronald Reagan's secretive movements involving arms sales to Iran built up to an explosion when the questioned activities were discovered. By breaking laws and going against United States policy, he betrayed the trust and faith of Americans. Denial and ignorance ran rampant through the White House officials which led to a major investigation that uncovered events occurring since before 1985. The chronology included numerous unauthorized arms sales to Iran, others supposedly based on the release of American hostages held captive in Beirut. The Iranscam investigations had also revealed former National Security Council member, Lt. Colonel John North's efforts to funnel aid to the Nicaraguan contras, collecting aid from private sources and other countries. These figures were also added to by some aid provided by congress. On January 12, 1987, sources said that at least $40 million gathered for the rebels remained unaccounted for.

President Reagan, when asked about the dealings, answered questions to the best of his knowledge. He supported investigations although they seemed to be incriminating him. The president said he hired the best men for the National Security Council, and didn't watch over their shoulder and criticize the way they did their job. Accumulating reports showed him at fault more than the executors and policy breakers. The Iran-Contra affair proved to be the greatest controversy since Nixon's Watergate Scandal.

ROBERT MCFARLANE

GEORGE SHULTZ

Sad Harvest, No Harvest

Throughout the food belt farmers were pushed to extremes. In the southeast states, the lack of water led to stunted, burnt-up crops and unworkable soil. However, the "lucky" farmers of the middle eastern states who had successful crops lost out also. The years of overabundance of many foods and products caught up. Farmers sold their farm machinery in auctions for a fraction of their price and banks foreclosed on many who could not make their mortgage payments.

Witnesses break down facts in the Iran-Contra hearings.

President Reagan and Gorbachev disagree during the summit.

Uncurable Killer

A.I.D.S., or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome took its toll in the United States. Already, 1 to 1.5 million Americans are thought to be infected with the virus. The numbers continue to escalate. The Public Health Service predicts that by the end of its first decade, 1991, 180,000 A.I.D.S. victims will have died. Scientists continue to look for possible cures.

Sailing to Fame

Adding one on to the 132-year winning streak, Dennis O'Connor sailed the Stars and Stripes back to its hometown of San Diego for celebration over winning the America's Cup back from Australia. Racing best out of seven, Stars and Stripes took the first four and any chance of retaining the cup from New Zealand's Kookaburra.

Star Wars Sinks Summit

Images of peace were hopefully on the horizon when President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev held a series of meetings in Iceland. Negotiations halted when the two couldn't come to an agreement over "Star Wars," a space-based shield of anti-missile satellites.

Corn shriveled in the southeast because of drought.

Dennis O'Connor brought the America's Cup back to America.

Get Smart

Students sport popular "Get Smart" buttons.

Campuses all over San Diego showed the latest fashion trend: the "Get Smart" button. Channel Eight sponsored the Anti-drug campaign in our schools. San Diego also did its part in the nation's fight against drugs. By witnessing marches, rallies, and special programs, the country increased its awareness of the problem. Voluntary drug testing became popular in government, businesses, and even in schools. After decades of abuse, America had finally taken the first step towards termination: awareness. "We must make drug use the top item in the national dialogue," stated President Ronald Reagan. Yet America still has a way to go in ridding the country of abuse. Although laws have tightened around pushers and smugglers, pounds of narcotics pass through our borders undetected.

Moonlighting stars Shepherd and Willis named man and woman of the year.

In memory of Ronnie Robertson, sophomore, who passed away. He had a heart condition.

Woman of the Year Philippine President Corazon Aquino, named woman of the Year by Time magazine, stands proud as the leader of the Southeast Asian country including 56 million people and more than 7000 islands. As the world looked on she led a campaign to overthrow former president Ferdinand Marcos and then restored the pride of her countrymen. Although a naive political leader at this point, she continues to learn and has never backed down from her important position. Happy Birthday Harvard Harvard, one of the United States' oldest and most prestigious private universities put the 350th candle on its cake this past year. The school has graduated many powerful people such as John F. Kennedy, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and John Adams. It has received 29 Nobel prizes thus far. Harvard's outstanding reputation of ex-

Corazon Aquino confidently rules the Philippines.

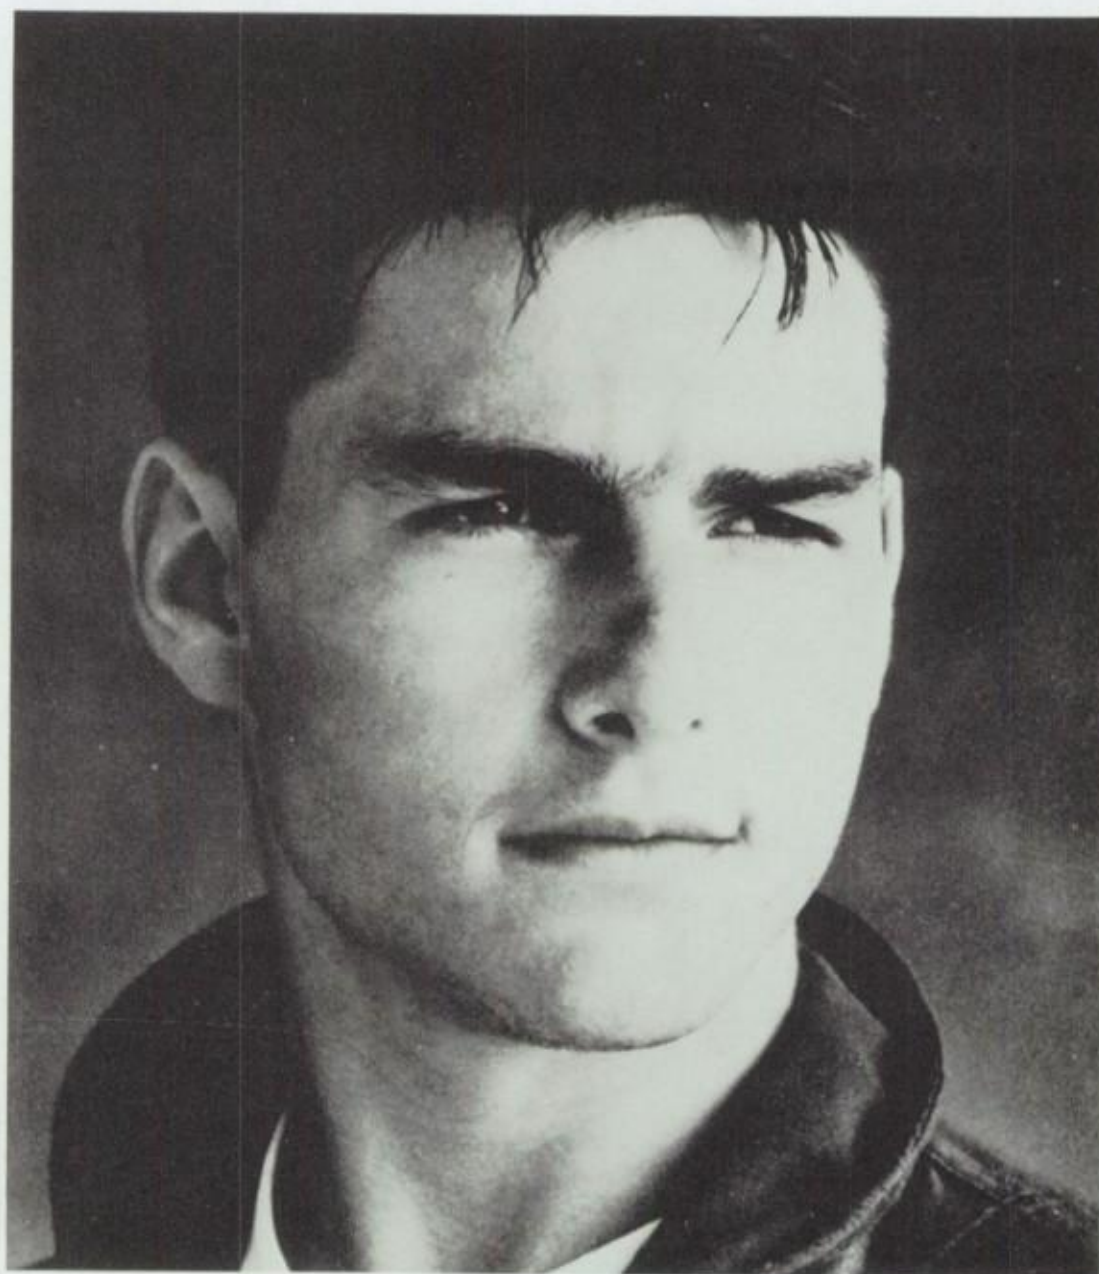

Sarah Ferguson weds Prince Andrew as the world looked on.

Top Gun Flies High Last summer, movie screens showed planes diving, spinning and soaring throughout the sky. Top Gun, a movie about Navy fighter pilots and their moves, impressed the public. Tom Cruise portrayed a more mature role compared to his past characters. The publicity boosted the enrollment into the Navy and Air Force.

Come on, one thousand! Vanna White, letter turner on one of television's most popular game shows, Wheel of Fortune, was introduced to fame as her popularity escalated. Although appearing on the show for many years in shimmering fashions, it was not until recently that her hostess position became acknowledged. She inspired game show hostesses with her sincerity.

Tom Cruise, flying high as star of Top Gun.

cellence continues to linger with each graduating class. Royal Wedding: Two Down, One to go Last summer, Prince Andrew, the second son of England's Queen Elizabeth II, and Sarah "Fergie" Ferguson, friend of Princess Diana, tied the knot. Appearing in the spotlight, they received not only a new spouse but new titles as well — The Duke and Duchess of York. The ceremony was watched by viewers all over the world as well as the thousands in Britain who lined the streets of London to see the couple before and after. TV's Man and Woman of the Year The Hollywood Radio and Television Society named actor Bruce Willis and actress Cybill Shepherd, stars of ABC's hit television series Moonlighting, as man and woman of the year. They portray characters David Addison and Maddie Hayes, owners of a reputable detective agency. Both the show and the actors became popular this past year. The Cosby Show, starring Bill Cosby, still ranks as one of the top shows in the nation.

Literary Contest

First Place Winner

Too many times
we laugh too quickly and spatter ridicule like specks of hot oil in the face of another's shame and because we don't see the tears behind defiant eyes or the painful weight crushing shoulders pulled back proud we forget, beneath the strong, indifferent facade we are breaking a fragile heart.

Tami Marko — 12th grade

Second Place Winner

"Wartime"

Down the crimson halls we did walk.
Pencil, pen and books in hand.
Plato, theory was the talk.
School days washed away like sand.

We sat around the pub till dawn,
Spreading words of enlightenment.
But to the Government I'm but a pawn,
There's little time for sentiment.

Oh, those verdant ivy walls.
Fraternity life, parties, game,
Insignificant as a brother falls.
Poor lad, knows no fame.

So long to private education.
So much for Literature French.
Little joy or elation,
As schrapnel pervades our trench.

Glen Tripp — 12th grade

Third Place Winner

In Silence I Walk

Can you hear the silence
That screams within me?
No?
I don't blame you for it.
It's not a pleasant inner-silence,
Amid an external conflict.
It's a silent storm,
With turbulent waters,
Huge, wild waves,
And hurricane winds,
Crashing on the islands of my soul,
And the reefs of my mind.

Shahjehan Cheema — 12th grade

Honorable Mentions

Whirlwind of black masses, the darkness engulfs my fright-frozen heart and my senses reel into the unknown as my mind screams as it slips into the underworld.
It shoots through my body like an express train on fire and burns the soul in me til ashes in grey heap smolder bright orange in hope Touch, driven from my fingertips grossly grab at everything around me, trying to escape from being dragged under and sucked into the black hole.
head, leaded heavily, imperfect, spins incessantly, lacking direction, and losing domination of control, leaving it to the demon writhing to do as its soggy heart pleases in order to fulfill our deepest wishes and fantastical desires.
Only the bathroom mirror grips the shredding reality in my scraped mind and tells me the morning will always come.

Liza Yum — 12th grade

Player

Let's play jacks jumprope marbles tops hopscotch hide and go seek tag you're it

come out, come out wherever you are.
We skate race

then turn to stoop ball box ball punch ball stick ball and harder games of baseball football and basketball for hours at the playground in rain, in snow, refusing to give in to darkness or growing up until Necessity also known as Responsibility, rears her head and calls us home for supper, marriage, and parenting players of my own.
But Piaget tells me
"Play is the serious business of youth,"
and, forever young,
I continue to play
molding words into poems poems into people and people into children once again.

Mr. Frank Barone — Teacher

The Sunrise

Listen now to calling birds humming songs in the morning.
They sing their lives with a smile living love and flirting style.

As you look out east in yonder clouds
the glare will flash in your eyes as you begin to dream of the sunrise.

Take one step up the stairs and realize a place full of fears
The feeling is new to you as it uncovers a place rich in value.

But as you listen with open ears
the idea sparks an immortal flame
The pain of yesterday dies as you begin to see the sunrise.

Brian Rauch — 12th grade

Editor's Note:

By Julie Dickinson

The outcome of this year's second annual Odyssey literary contest, was tremendous. With over 130 entries, our staff was given the hard task of choosing the best poems. Although many of the poems deserved to be printed, space allowed only room for the top five. Choosing these five poems was a very challenging and debatable experience for our staff. Each poem was evaluated on a scale from 1-5. Consideration on creativity and meaning was the main weighing factor in judging. Hopefully, this contest will remain an annual part of the Odyssey, and become even bigger and better. Thank you for all of the contributions, and keep writing!

Competition Introduced

Not only did the Odyssey staff make the pages of the yearbook, they had to find ways to help finance it. Advertisements fulfilled this need. All staffers were required to sell spots, and they went to numerous places in Poway and Rancho Bernardo and beyond to find buyers. "It took a lot of time and it was difficult, because many business headquarters were out of state," explained Jennifer Stampfli.

A free yearbook was offered to the staffer who sold the most ads. The competition grew and ads poured in. Finally, the ads were counted and the totals showed that Elisa Smith, underclassmen, was the winner with eleven spots sold. Elisa said, "It took me a lot of time, persuasion, and persistence to get the businesspeople to help support the yearbook. Some people were harder to convince than others, but it paid off in the end." Others also sold many ads. They enjoyed helping to design what the businesspeople wanted. Kim Wayland, photographer stated, "It was slow getting started, but once I actually went to sell ads, it was fun."

"It was tough selling ads because most business people didn't consider it advertising since it was yearbook, many didn't think it was good enough to spend their money on. It made me feel bad because I tried so hard and I kept being turned down. I appreciate everyone who did contribute and helped support the yearbook." — Debi Quesenberry, senior.

Advertising may not be a section that everyone first notices, but a lot of hard work was put into it. Many hours were spent selling and many bills, receipts, and thank you letters were written. The advertising section was an important part of the yearbook often overlooked.

"You must admit, the advertising section is not the first thing people look at when they get their yearbook," stated Jim Roberts. If this is true, why all the sweat over the section? Mainly, it finances the lower cost of the yearbook — which makes it possible for the Odyssey to offer such a quality book for affordable prices to the students. So again, a special thanks to all the generous businesses that supported the Odyssey!

Taking A Final Glance Back

"What a year," sighed Junior Suzi Fink on June 17th, the last day of the 1986-87 school year. As the underclassmen finished up their last final exam and cleaned out their lockers, the seniors calmed their nerves for the 7:30 pm graduation ceremony. And through all of this, the events and memories of the school year passed through everyone's mind.

"I still remember the excitement and thrill of victory when we beat Granite Hills at our first real home game!" stated Cindy Brundige. All of Poway High's sports continued their trend of success. Girls volleyball and tennis made the CIF playoffs, and helped contribute to the definition of the "MIGHTY TITANS!" Overall, the entire athletic department boosted the tremendous school spirit and pride that kept the student body interested.

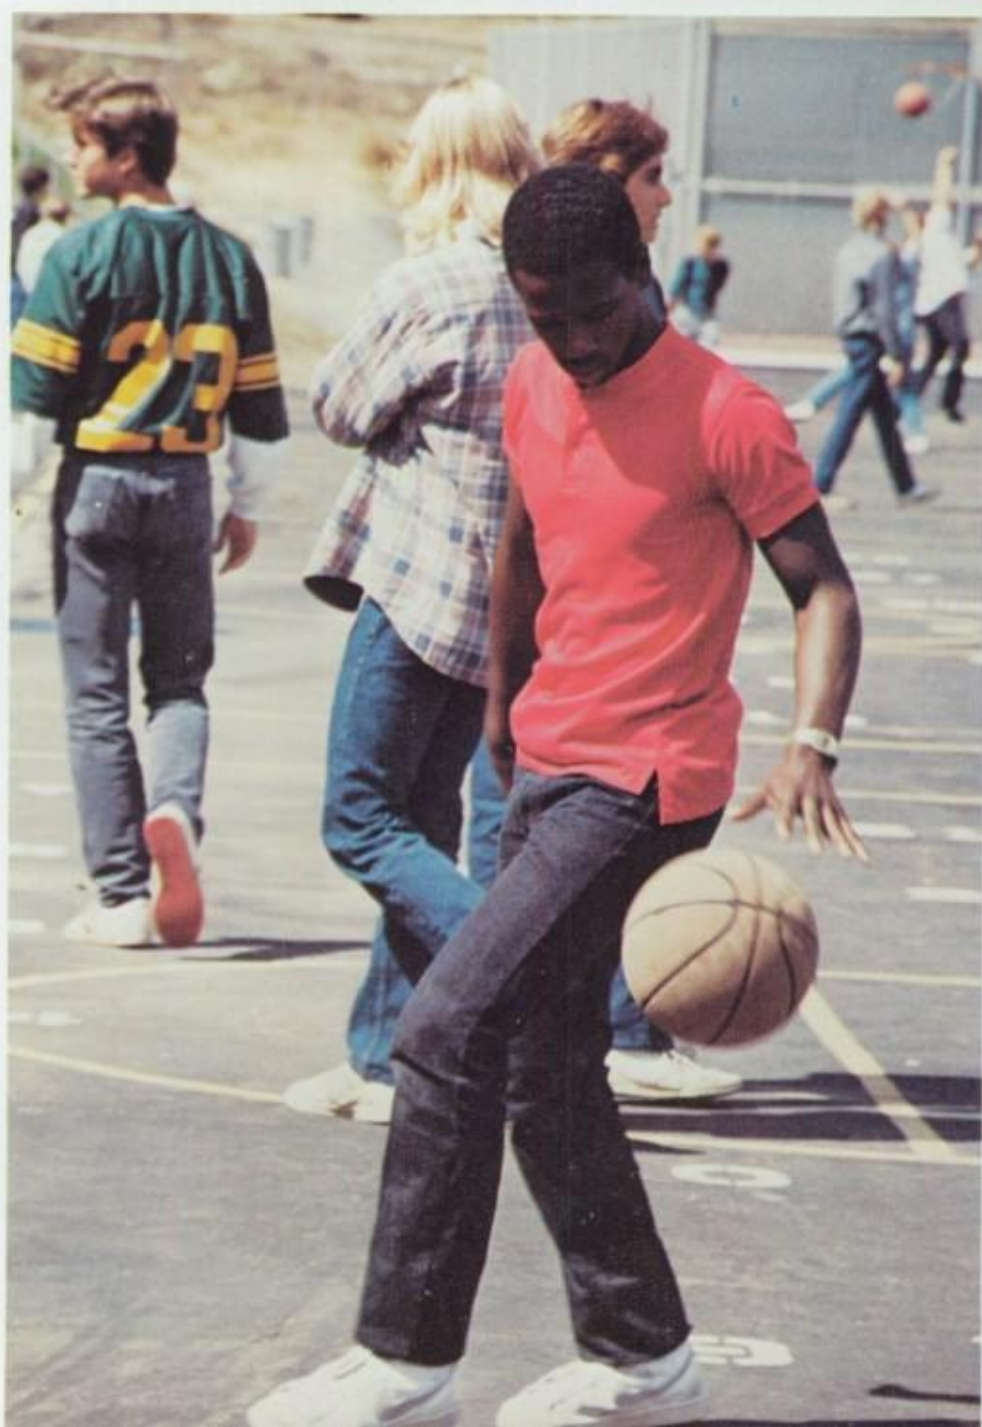

"I'll always remember the dances that I attended over the year, especially the 'Club Caribbean' Sadies Dance," exclaimed Brady Hamilton.

With the geeky-attire MORP dance, the semiformal Winterball, and the most formal Prom, most every extreme of dance was held.

Academics and classes hopefully stuck in the minds of the students as an important part of the school year. Freshmen adjusted and struggled through their first year in high school. The sophomores enjoyed a seemingly less difficult year while the juniors had to delve deeper into their brains to keep up with their demanding schedule. "My junior year taught me how to cram!" stated Phil Lalock. And the seniors sweated it out, waiting for hopeful college acceptances. "I felt my whole high school career become worthwhile when I got into the college of my first choice," stated Paul Mortaloni.

So, the seniors anxiously walked away from PHS, entering into a whole new world while the underclass walked away to yet another fun-filled summer vacation. And as the seniors, the class of 1987 entered the "real" world, and touched it with their own special way; the fond memories of Poway High will be remembered by them all.

Students Voice Opinion

By Julie Dickinson

The significant amount of change over the school year brought upon many negative comments from the students. They openly expressed their feelings about the transformation of PHS, and offered their opinions on what they would like to change.

Overpopulation of the campus aroused much dislike from the students. No one could understand the procrastination in building a new high school. One senior commented, "It would be great if they made the classes with only fifteen people." Crowded parking lots enraged a generous portion of the students. "Why don't they make enough parking for everyone?" asked Brian Korgel. Overcrowding, also hindered the faculty interaction with the students. Tami Marko said, "I wish that we could hire someone to do the paper work so the counselors could have more of a chance to counsel us students!"

The strengthened security caused quite an uproar with the students also. Kathy Stewart said, "The yard duties make us feel like we're part of the Poway Penitentiary." The strict hall pass system assured the detention population would rise. The addition of the black fences also caused some argument. Richard Haggerty firmly stated, "The fences should be removed. We're not animals; we are the future!"

In spite of all of the negative feelings about certain issues on the campus, one student summed up many feelings. "We should all be happy to attend such a great school!!!"

Learning Beyond the Classroom

By Julie Dickinson

"Oh Johnny, hurry up and get going, or you'll be late for school. You know that school is so important because you learn to read, write and do arithmetic!" For many people, the academic aspect of high school remained the "soul" purpose of waking up at 6 am every morning and hustling off to the large, tan colored building on Espola Road. Parents, as well as some PHS students, seemed to overlook the enormous amount of "non-academic" learning that evolved from attending high school.

The different clubs, sports, teachers and groups of people around PHS provided a diverse and widespread amount of education. Kim Uyeda commented, "Cross country has been valuable because it goes beyond the classroom and prepares one for the pressures and competition of life."

Other students credited older friends for teaching them secrets of success and happiness while attending school. Peggy Fitz explained, "Last year a friend told me, 'Your senior year can be great, but it's up to you to make it great.' He's right, and that comment has helped me gain my perspective on life and the importance of school!"

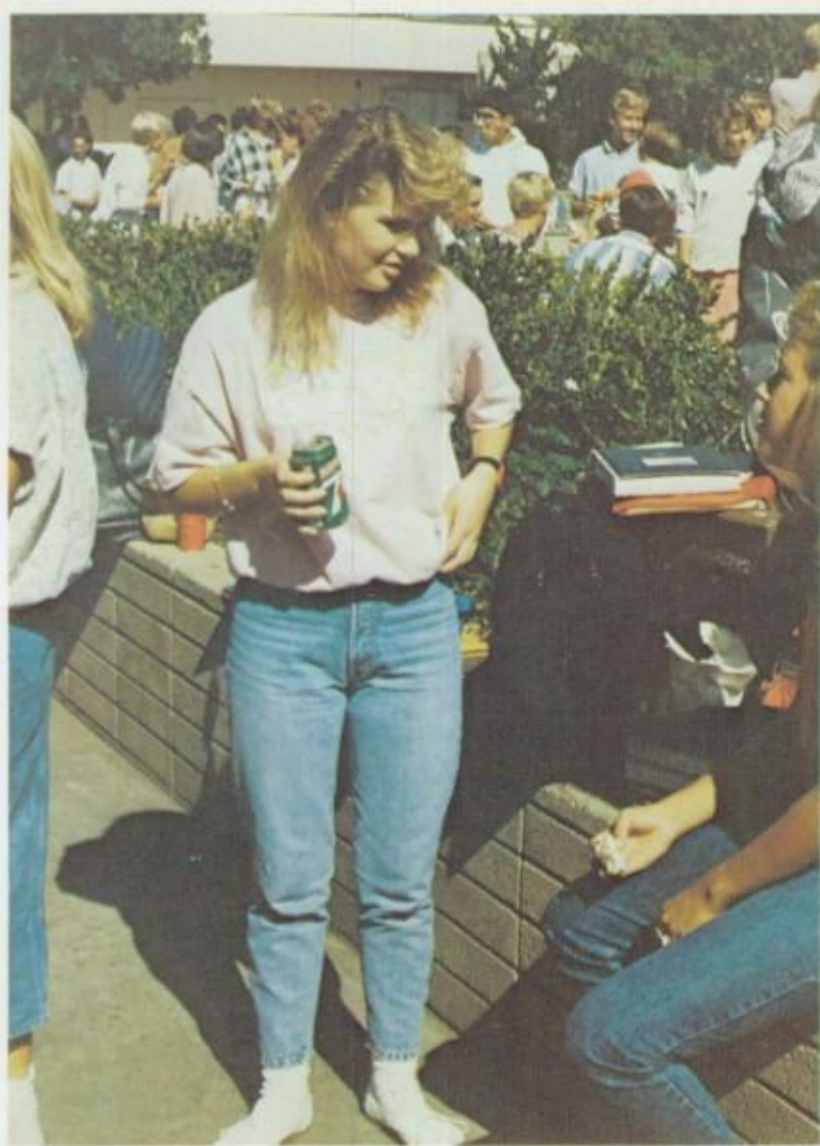

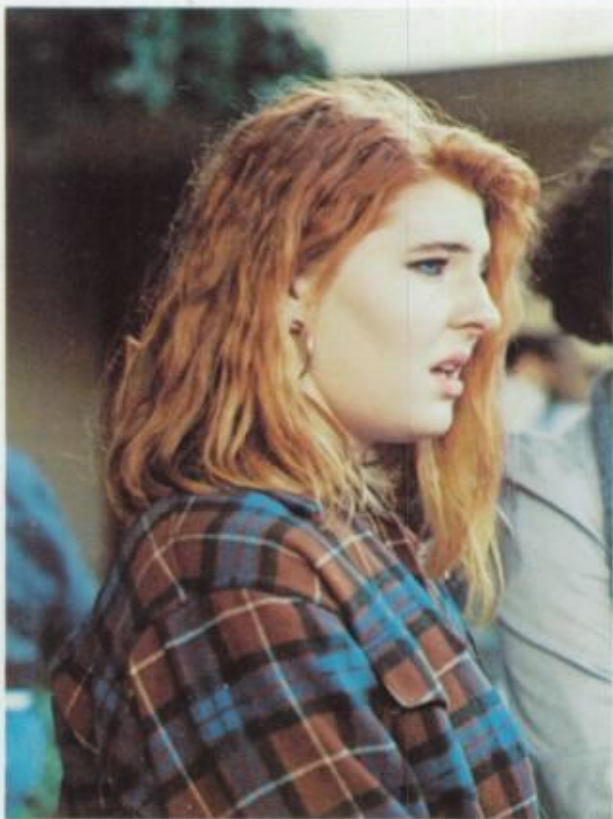

The major lesson that high school taught most of the students was about other people. "I learned that friends, I mean true friends, will stick by you even through the most difficult times," said John Mutti.

These valued learning experiences, combined with knowledge in various areas, were the "real" importance of attending school.

Seniors Deal With Future

By Julie Dickinson

"Life after high school? Hmm ... I've thought a lot about it, and I pretty much know what I'm going to do. But I sure didn't expect the end to get here so soon," commented a senior at the beginning of June. For most students, graduation day of their senior year is the most popular subject to talk about all through the four years of high school. That day, the day that they would finally be free of school, seemed like heaven during most of the year. But for the class of '87, the talk became reality.

"Sure I'm excited to graduate, but I sort of hate to leave Poway High. It has become my second home," said one sensitive senior. The tremendous excitement to go to college and finally "be on their own" thrilled the seniors to no end. The future, the life ahead of them actually didn't sink in until almost the end of the year. "Oh my gosh! I'm not finished with school, I'm going to be a freshman all over again!" exclaimed Mike Brown. The factor of college was sometimes put in the back of the seniors' minds.

But the endless wonderful memories of the times at PHS shall never escape the minds of the class of 1987. The football games, the Homecomings and Proms, the teachers and classes, and most of all the people, have been implanted in the memories of all the students. "High school was really fun and I'll miss it, but it's now time to really grow up!" said Senior Michelle Mazzeiti. Poway High has been touched in a very special way by the class of '87, but now it's time for the seniors to touch the world in their separate ways.
